Sights, sounds relate daytime activities

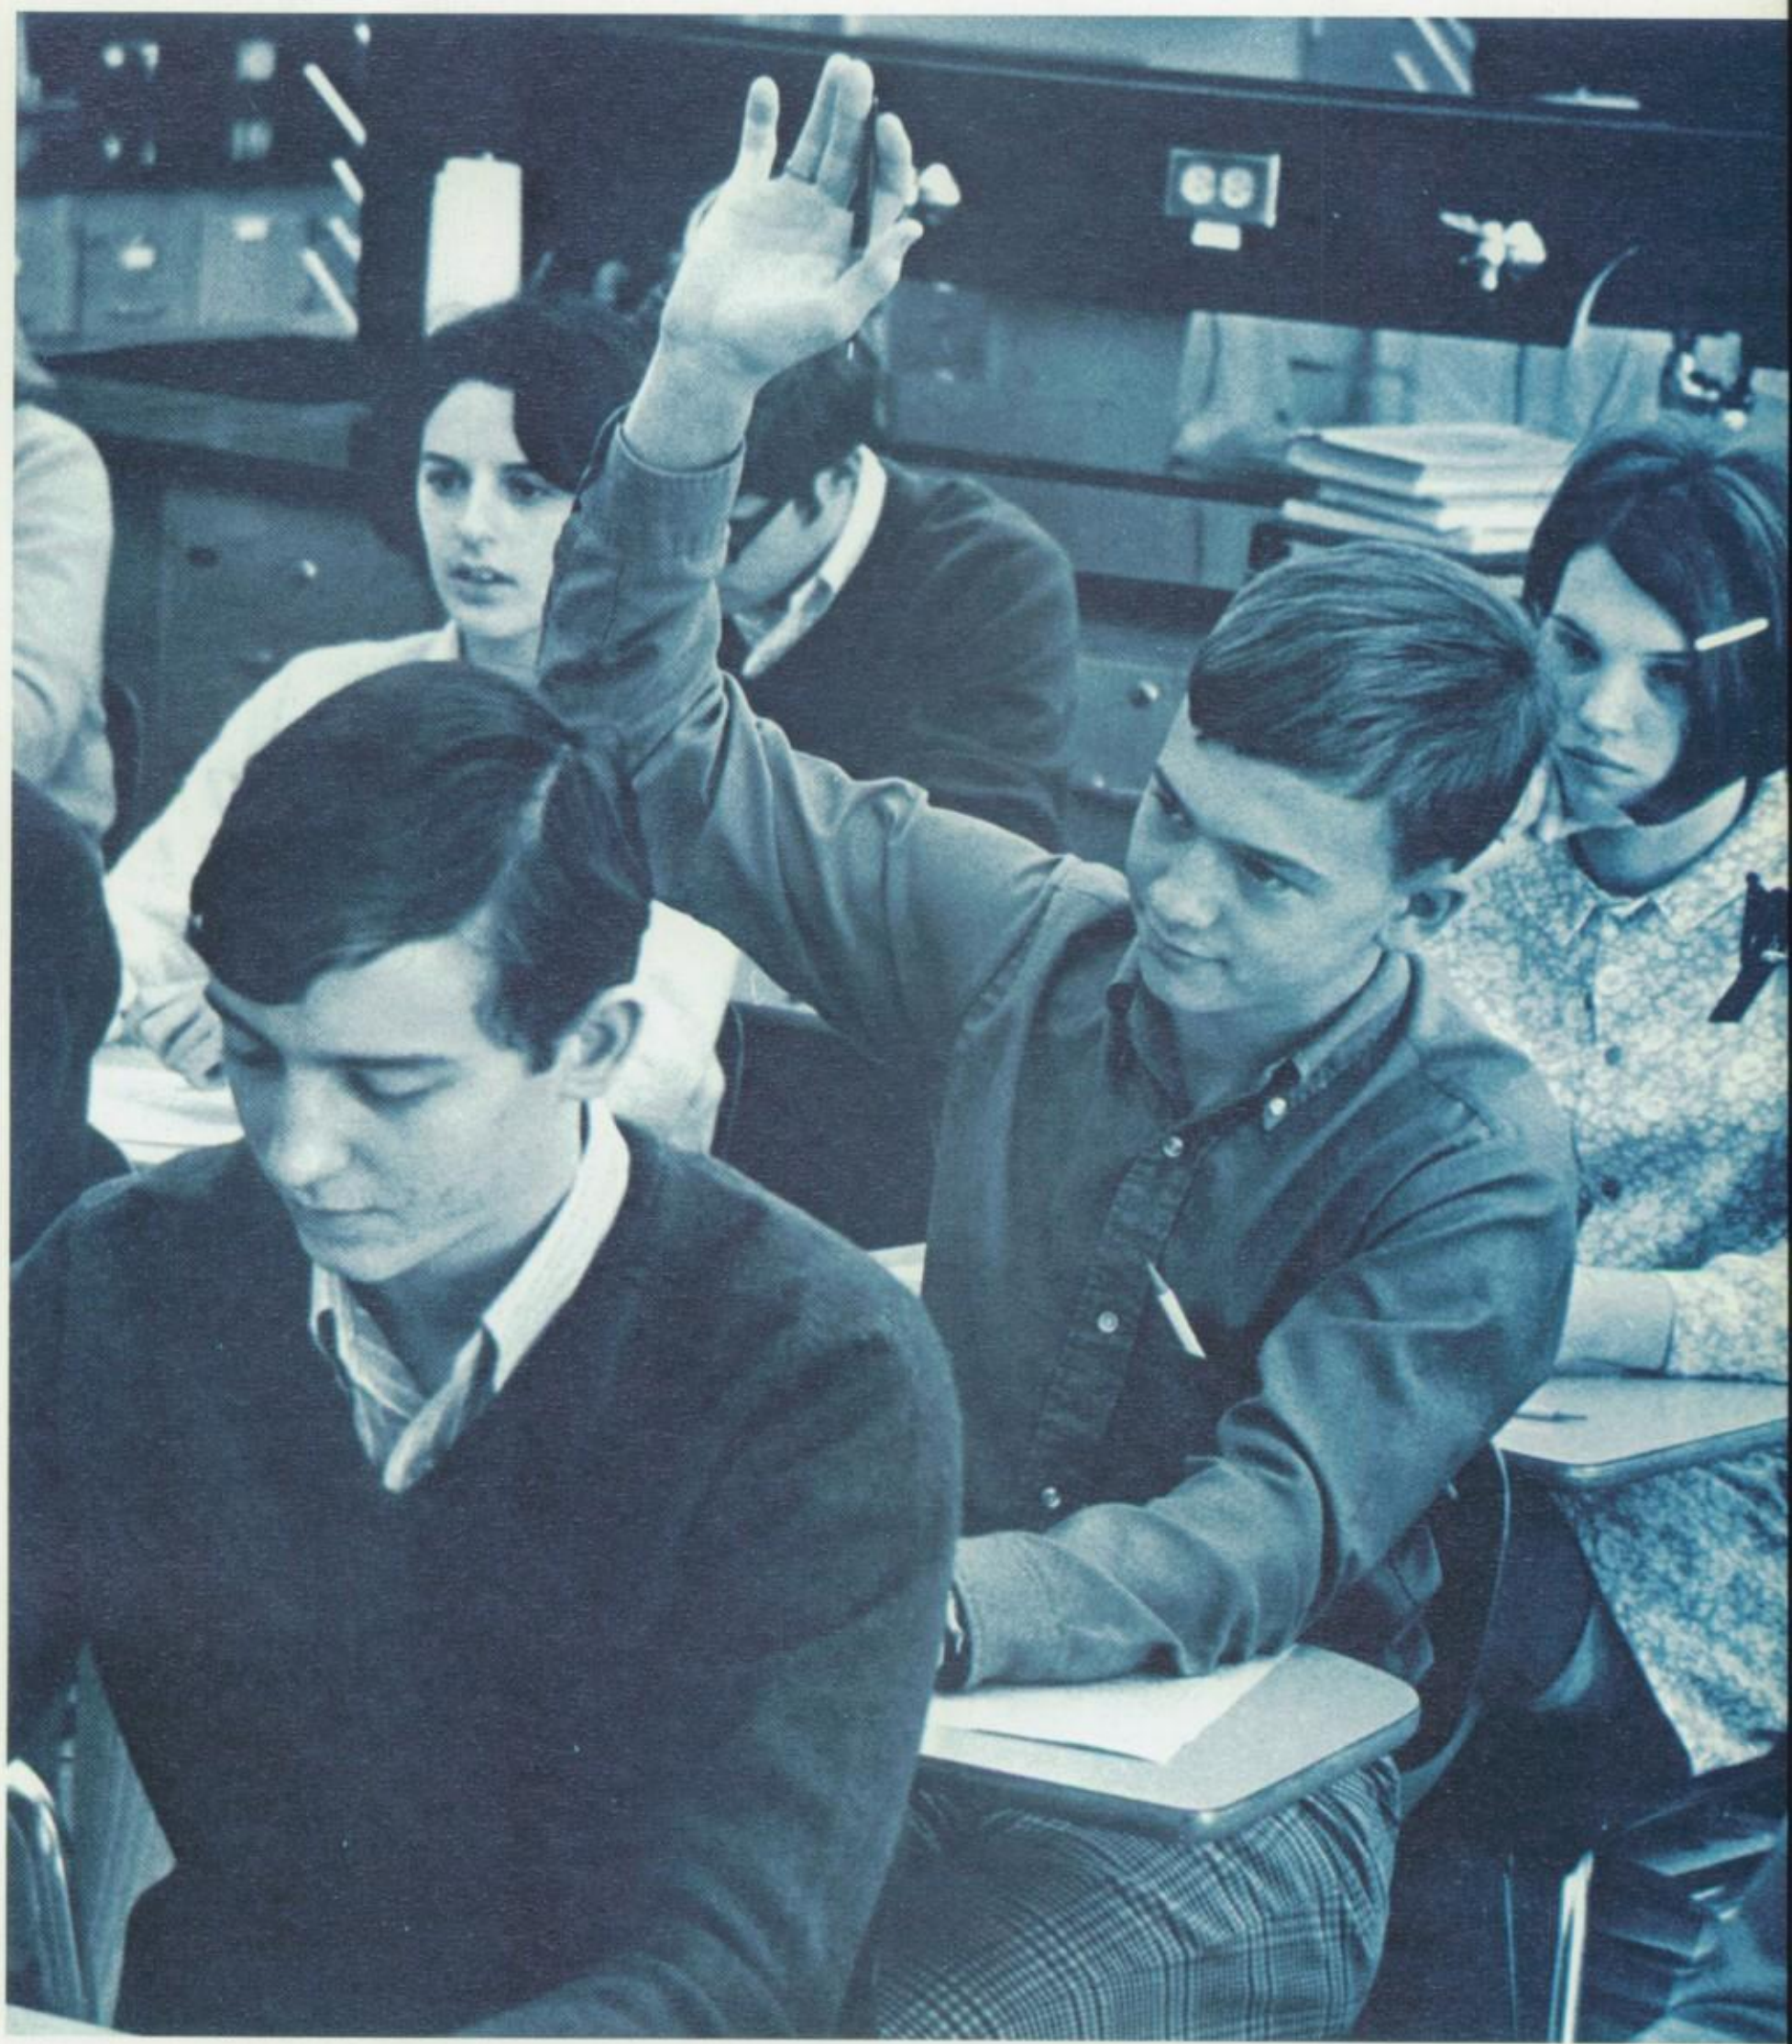

Candy, popcorn, crepe paper streamers and bobbing pony tails with colored ribbons — this is youth. It is ideals which are realized, problems which are solved, questions which are answered, feelings which are identified, thoughts which are understood, sounds which are interpreted. The rising aspirations, the simple joys, the blossoming hopes, the glory of life all summed up in this five-letter word. But what is all of youth without its memory?

As life continues and the door closes on youth, memory is the key which opens that door to reveal the crystal-clear ideals, the screaming and shouting, the tears, the gyrations, the cheering, the singing, the beauty, the love. The excitement of football, the cafeteria noise, the banging locker doors, the club meetings and the library quietness temporarily become reality as the far corners of the mind are called upon to remember. One may visualize the school itself, seven buildings each with a name and a purpose of its own or the mind may choose to remember the people which were a part of these buildings.

Scholars ponder, probe, create, achieve

The faces, the smiles, the laughing are perhaps the easiest to remember. Encompassing students at Greater Latrobe is a myriad of faces, each with a smile or frown or thoughtful expression, each different in its own way. A smile is flashed across a room. A typist dons serious expression. A mathematician owns a puzzled look. An astronomer casts a concentrating gaze. How can one forget the faces, the many faces?

Cheers encourage

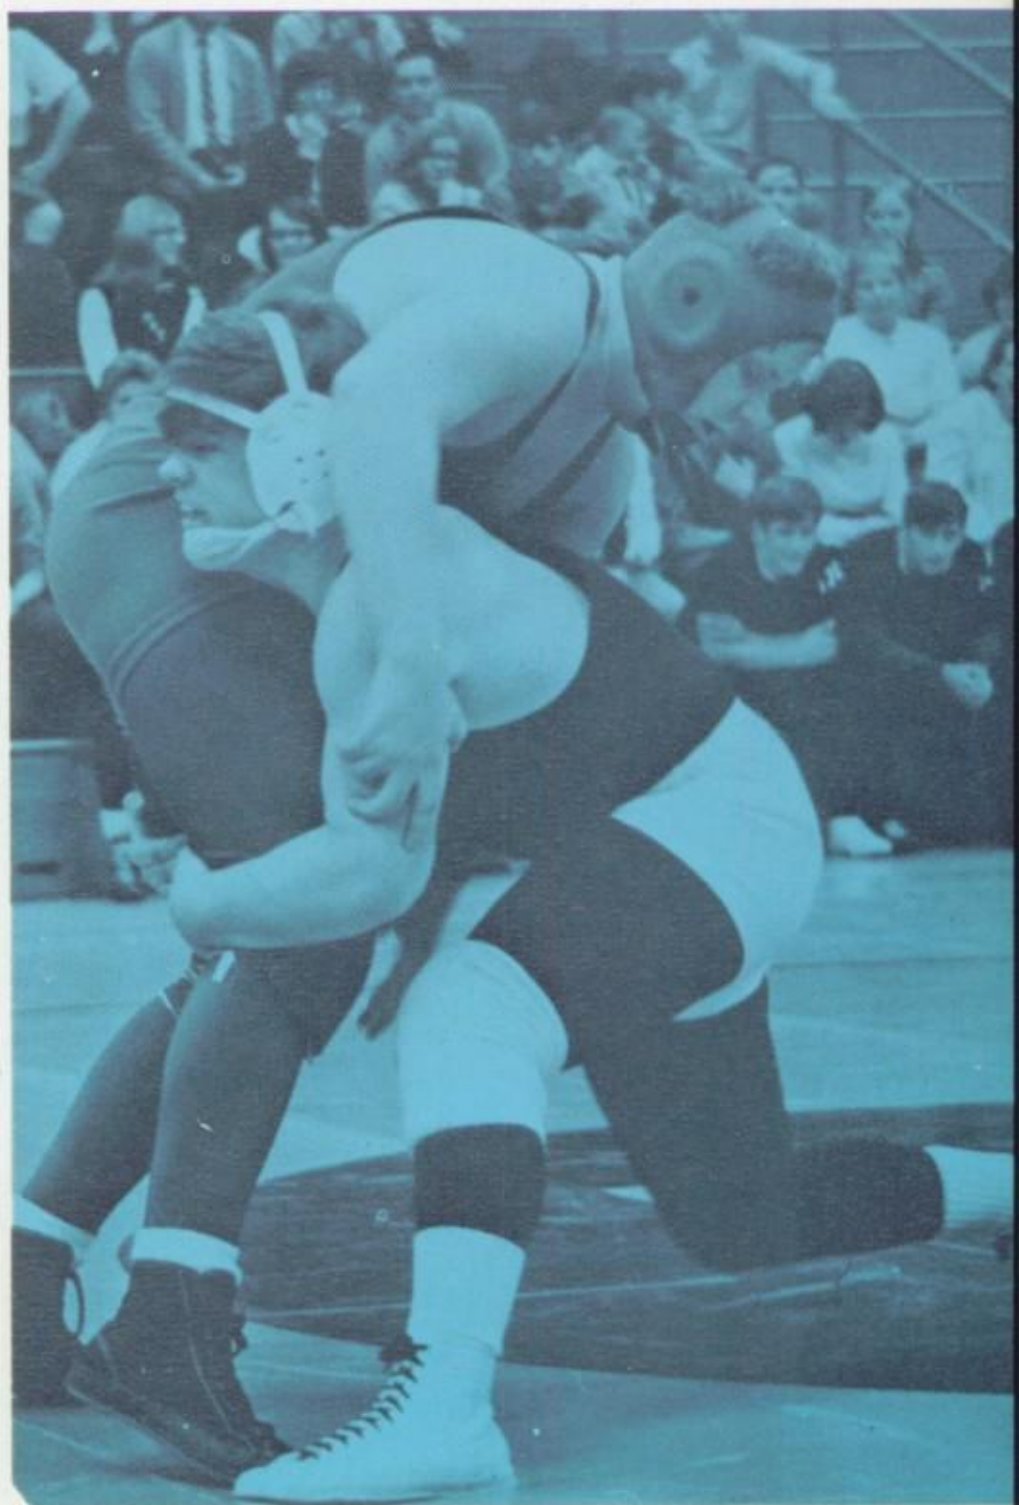

Sports excite all

With a clang, bang and slam, a school world bursts into action. It begins with the rumble of school buses pulling to the curb and concludes with the rumble of school buses pulling away. While in between lockers bang, dishes rattle, sports enthusiasts cheer and band members trudge across the yellow lines of the practice field. One finds it easy to remember the multitude of sounds which comprise the school day.

Band members form rhythmical patterns

Memories of sports events are prominent for many. Whether standing on the sidelines cheering or participating in the game, it has always been a facet of school life worth remembering. It was experiencing a kaleidoscope of color and action. It was seeing "Go Cats" badges and multi-colored balloons, orange pom-poms and bits of floating paper. It was hearing cowbells and frantic cheering, blaring trumpets and pounding drum cadences. It was knowing that school spirit was everywhere and "Our team was great!"

Studying, learning and achieving form a large part of the memories which students cherish. A biologist peered into a microscope. Lights flashed, motors whirred, and minds clicked as binary operations were performed on a computer in the math research center. A bunsen burner flared and a chemist transformed mercuric oxide into silver beads. Every day events were reduced to words as composition students related their thoughts. Education took place and an imaginary world became realistic.

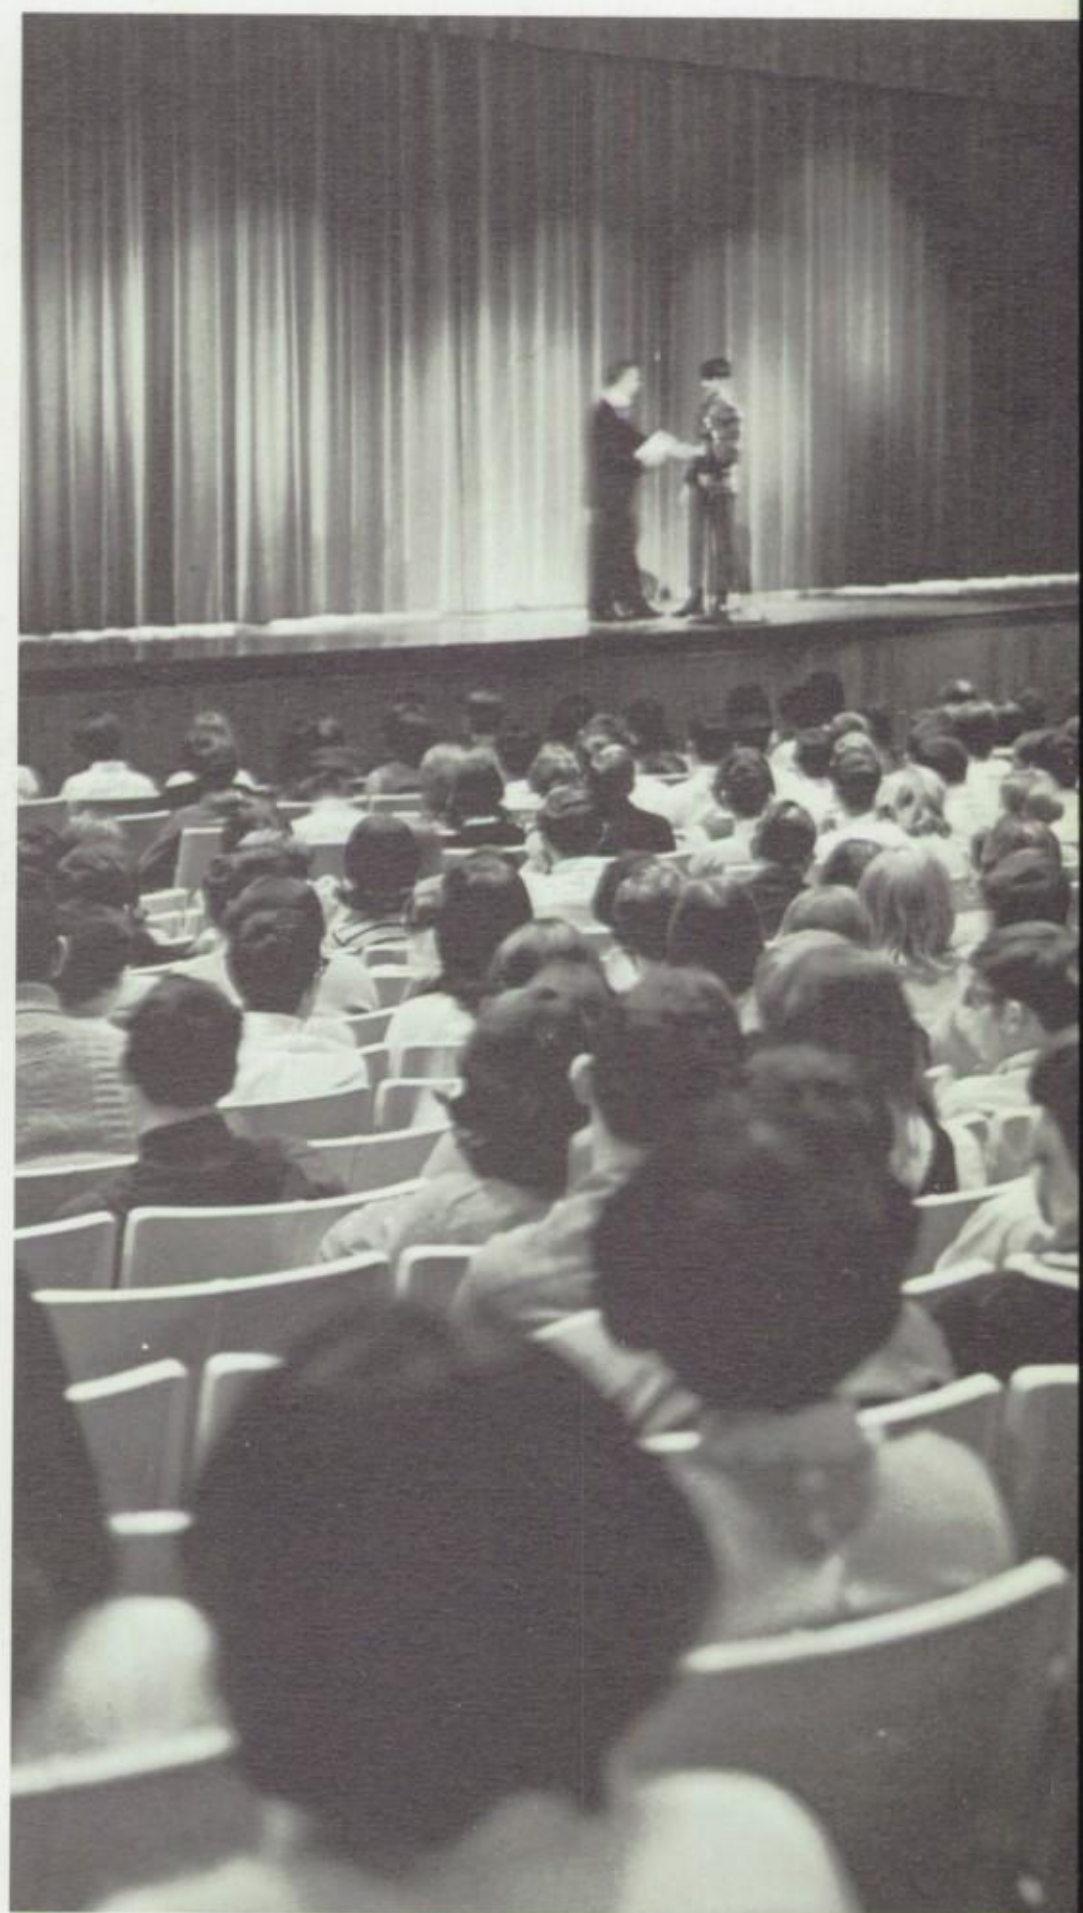

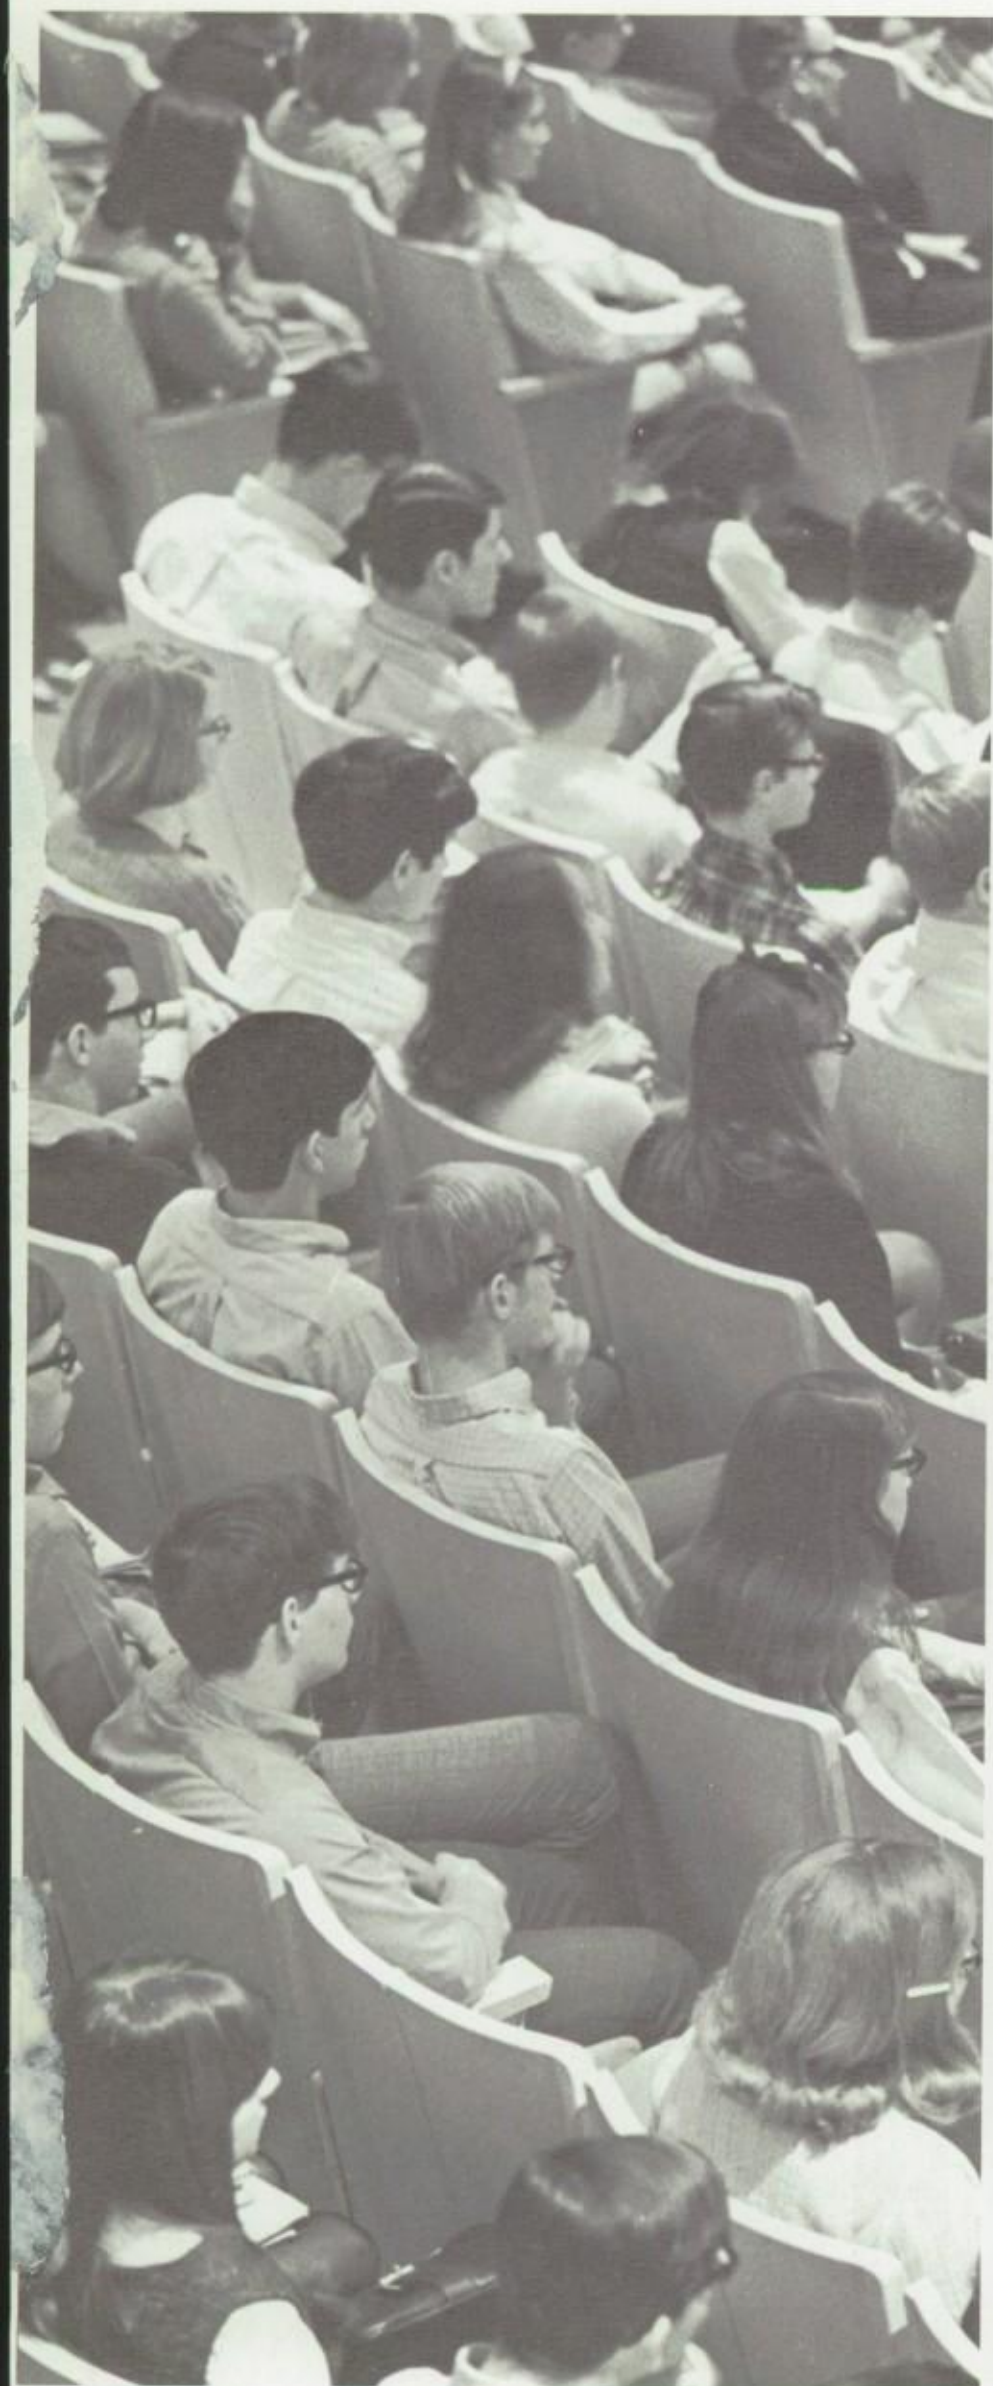

Scientists question

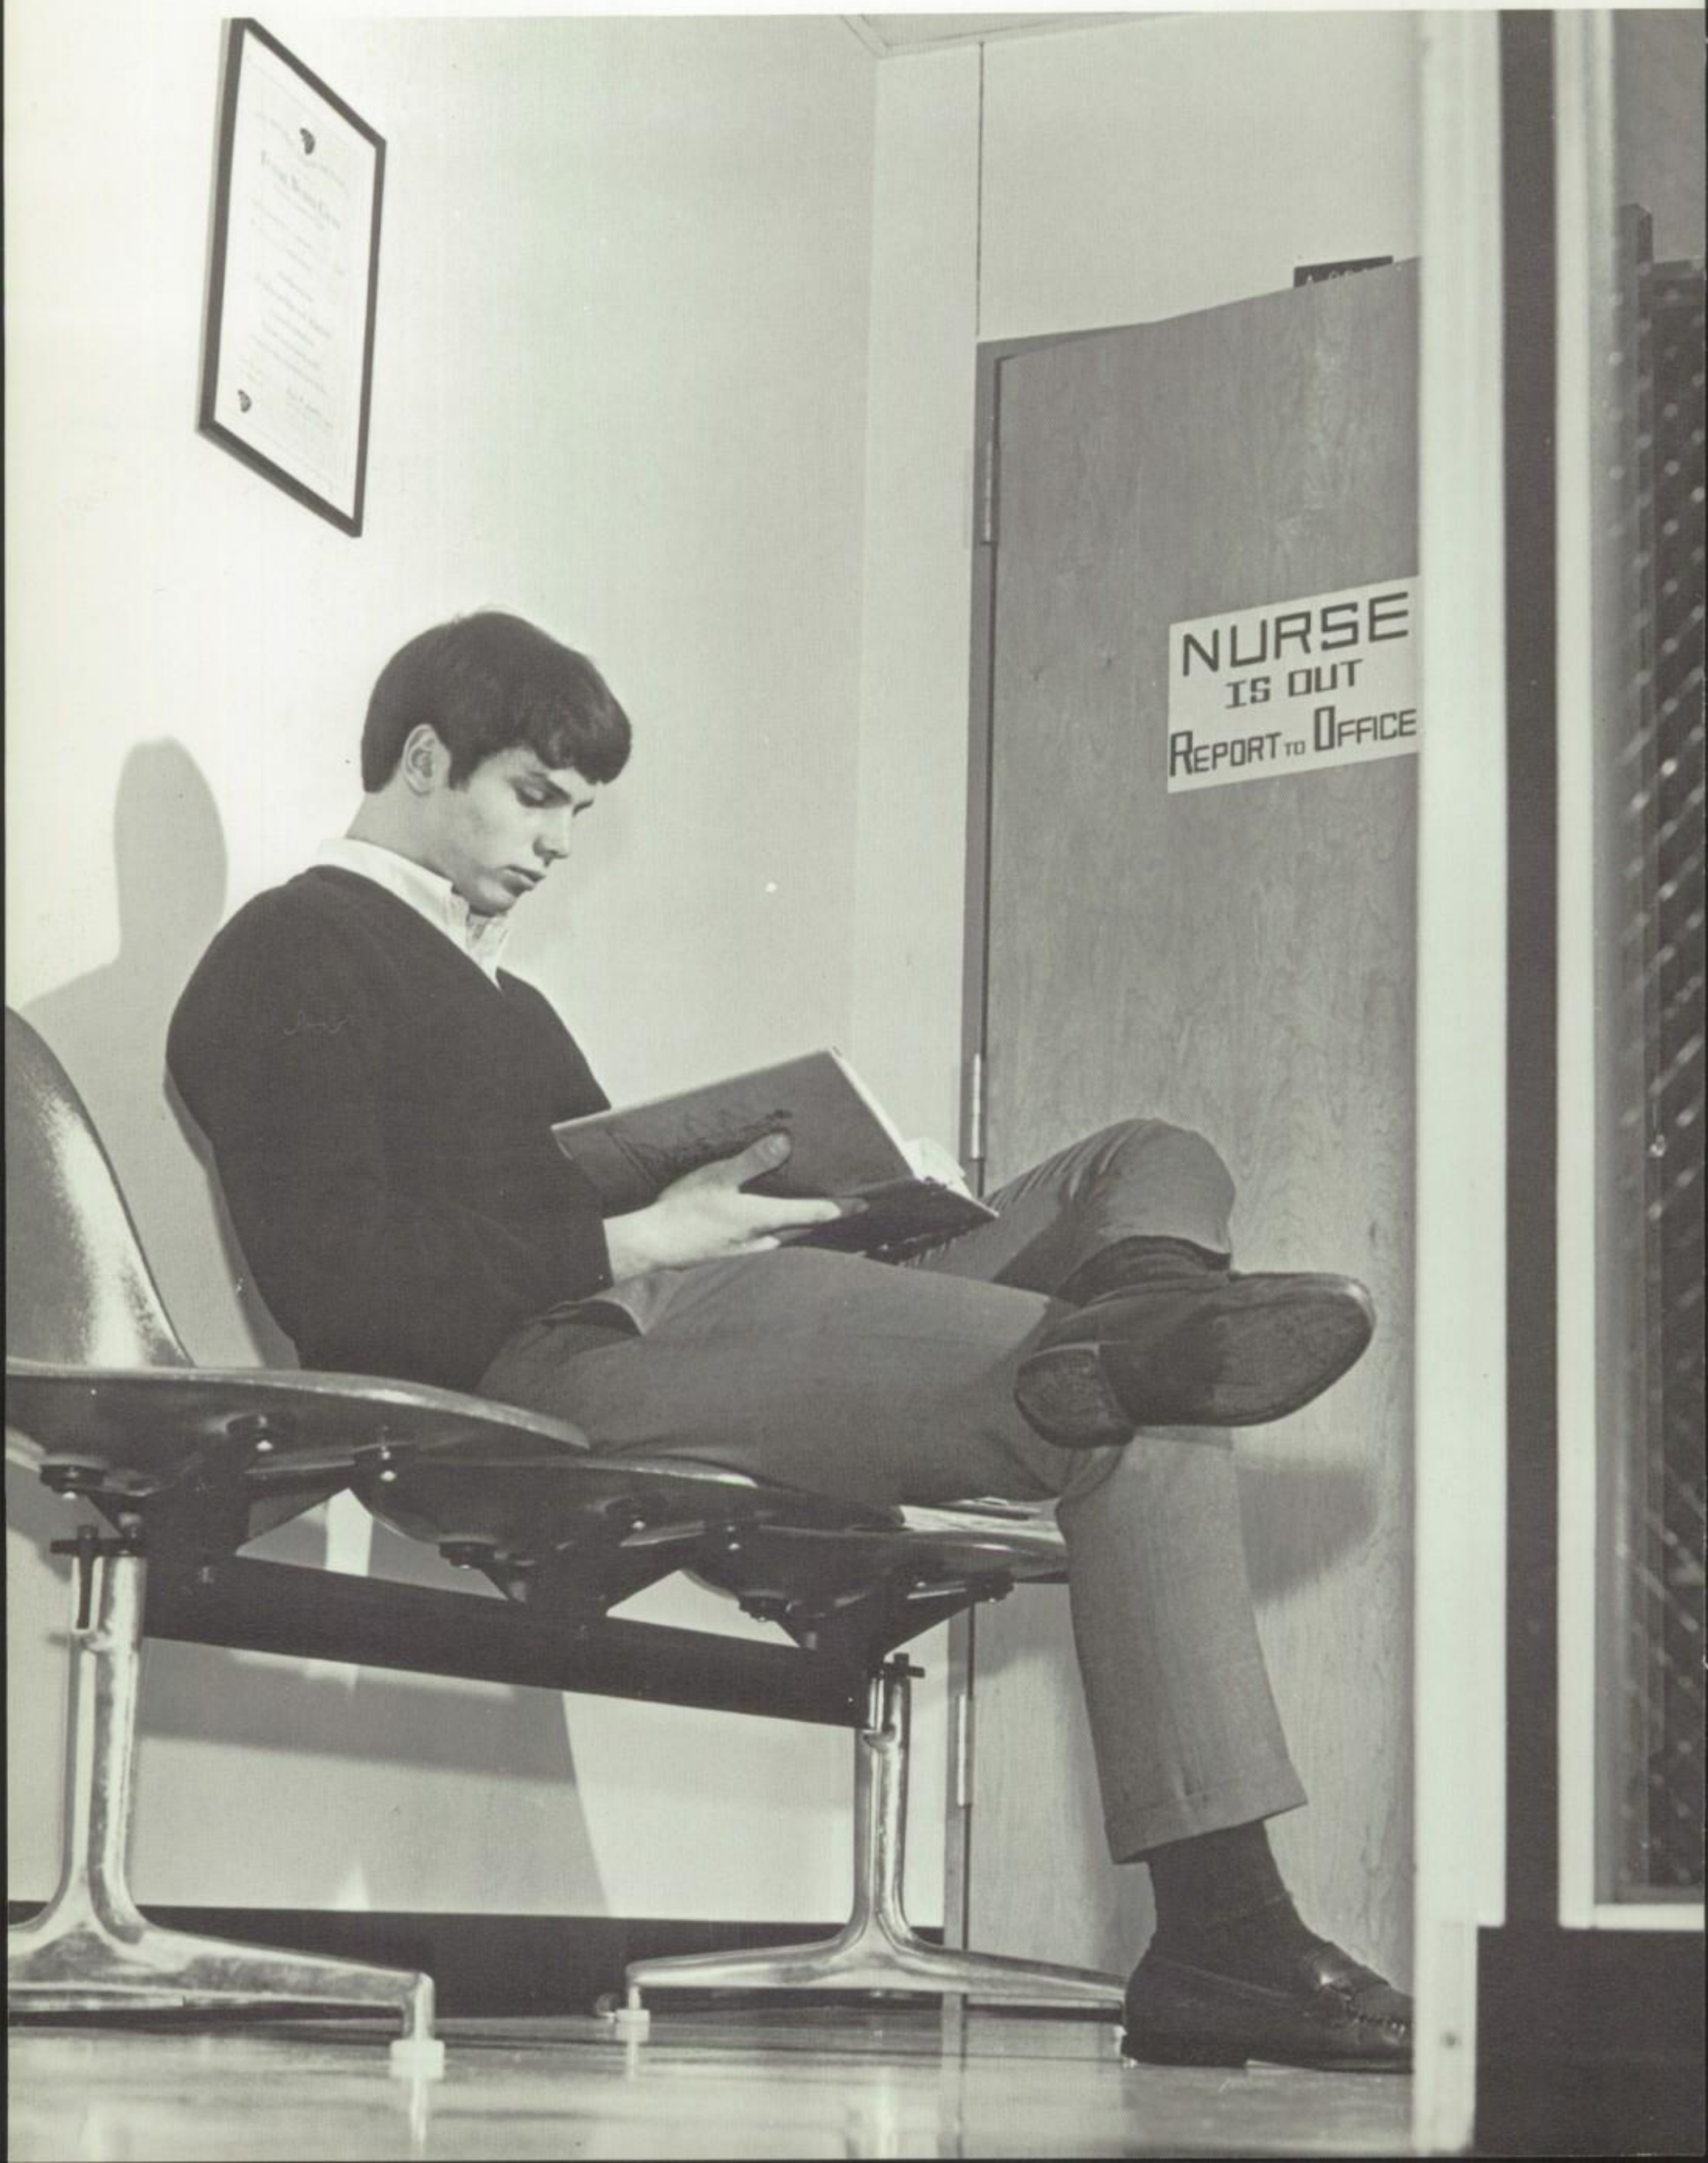

Assemblies enlighten

The mind is overwhelmed at the thought of the activities. So many happenings crowded the days and nights that finding enough time for school work was often difficult. Students flocked to Thursday night pep rallies or gathered on the slopes for an evening of skiing. Constant practicing for opening nights interrupted players' frantic studying between scenes. Amateur photographers dashed through the halls snapping action shots for Camera Club projects. Student Council spent after school hours working on beneficial programs. MLC members bedecked the cafeteria with snowflakes in preparation for the Snowball Bash. Each activity joined with learning to form the pattern of high school life.

Student life perpetuates lasting memories

Seniors have but to look ahead and imagine their futures. Underclassmen will follow in the paths set before them and continue to walk the halls of learning — searching, striving, succeeding. So many possibilities are yet to be explored. Many opportunities are yet to be encountered. Someone has yet to say “You have all this before you now so stand up and take notice.”

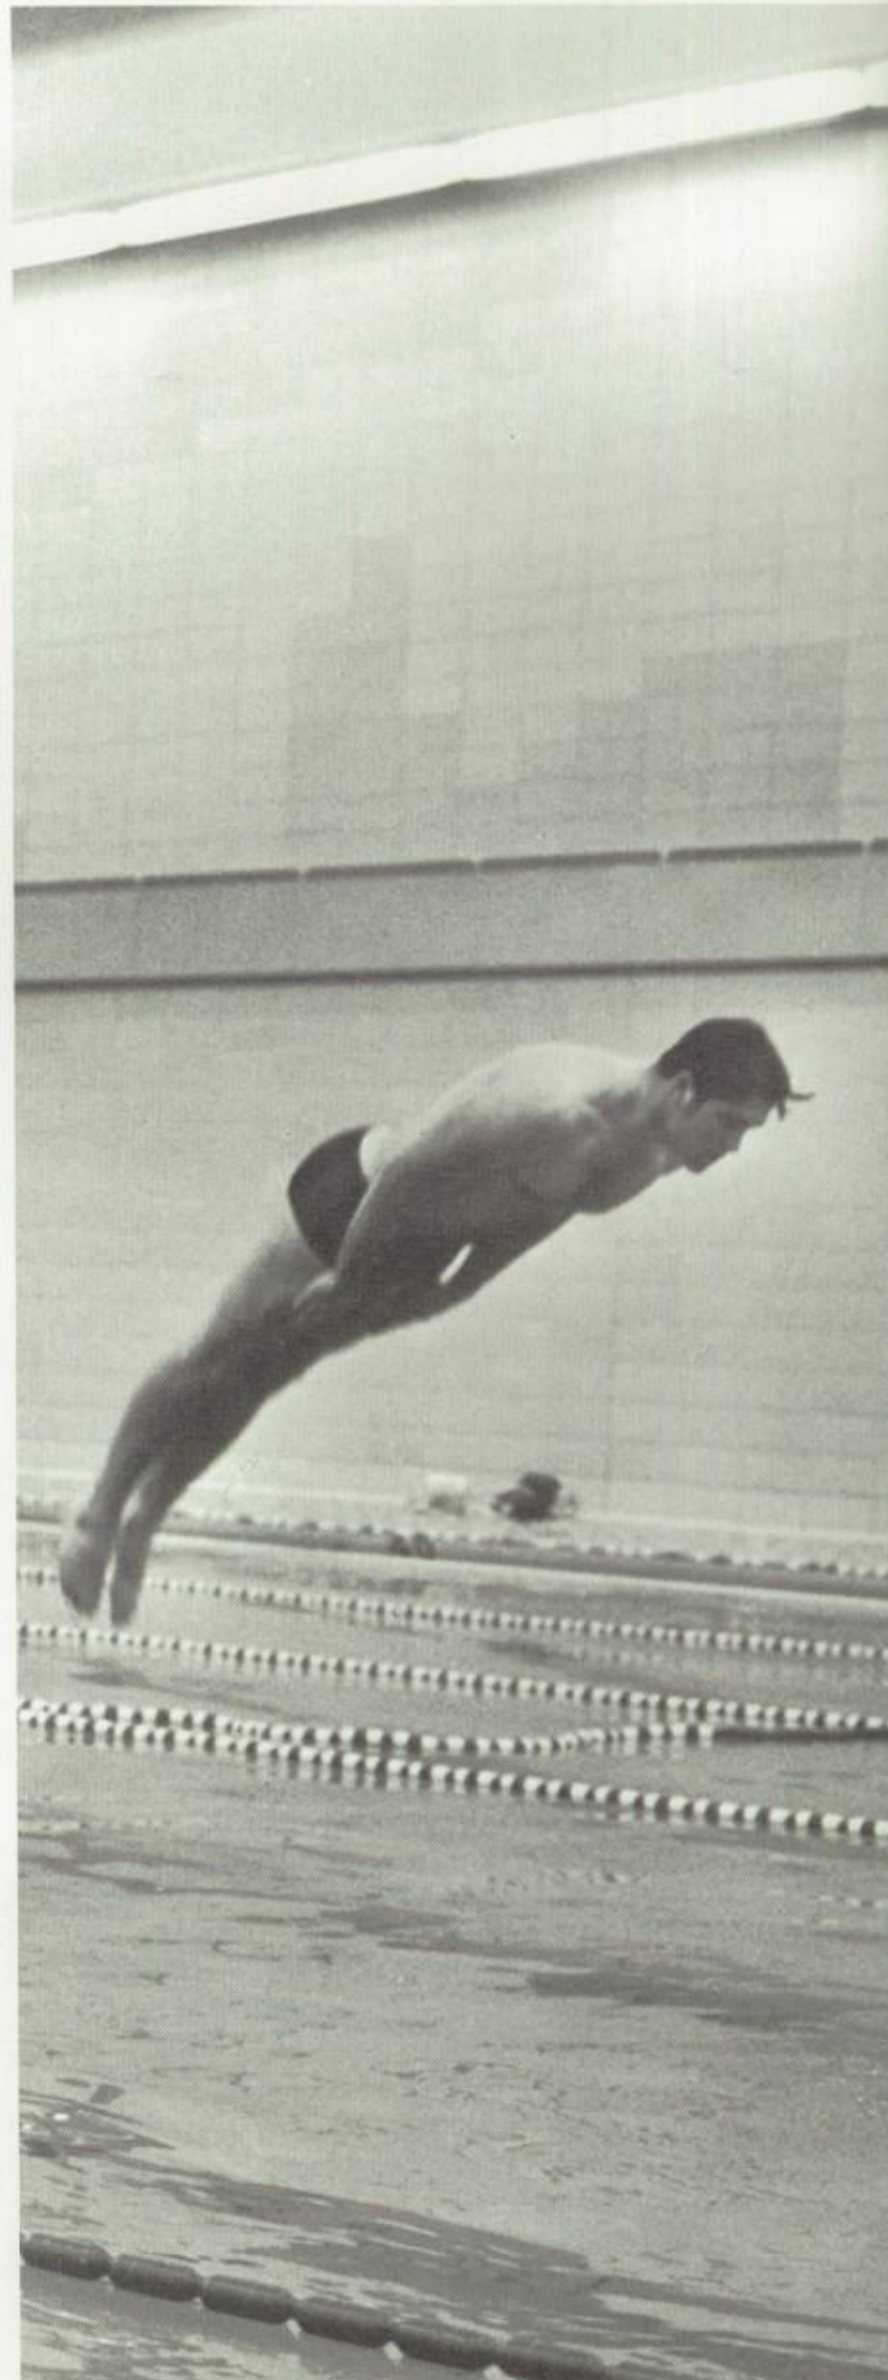

There are eyes, sometimes glistening with tears, sometimes overflowing with happiness. There are smiles symbolizing a team's victory or designating a student's success. There are books to read, thoughts to think, goals to achieve, places to go, things to do. There is youth uniquely entwined with the present to form a most blessed facet of life. But all these thoughts will soon trickle through the sieve of time and then, all that remains is memory — magnificent memory.

Flash! Bang! Smile! Remember all the activity? So many extra things helped to speed the week along at Greater Latrobe High. At 3 p.m. students not only raced to buses but also to the auditorium, the cafeteria, the band practice field, the locker room, the chorus room, the dark room or anyplace where the action was.

Many sounds kept the school constantly humming with activity — a gavel pounding, a drum beating, a choir singing, a ball bouncing, a saw buzzing. Everyone was on the move. Journalists rushed here and there searching for information. The musical cast danced across the stage practicing their routines and stunts while gymnasts swung from the rings and high bar. Yes, Greater Latrobe was activity and activity was the school.

STUDENT COUNCIL — Assuming a larger roll in the life of the school's population, the Student Council attempted to improve communications between students and the faculty and administration.

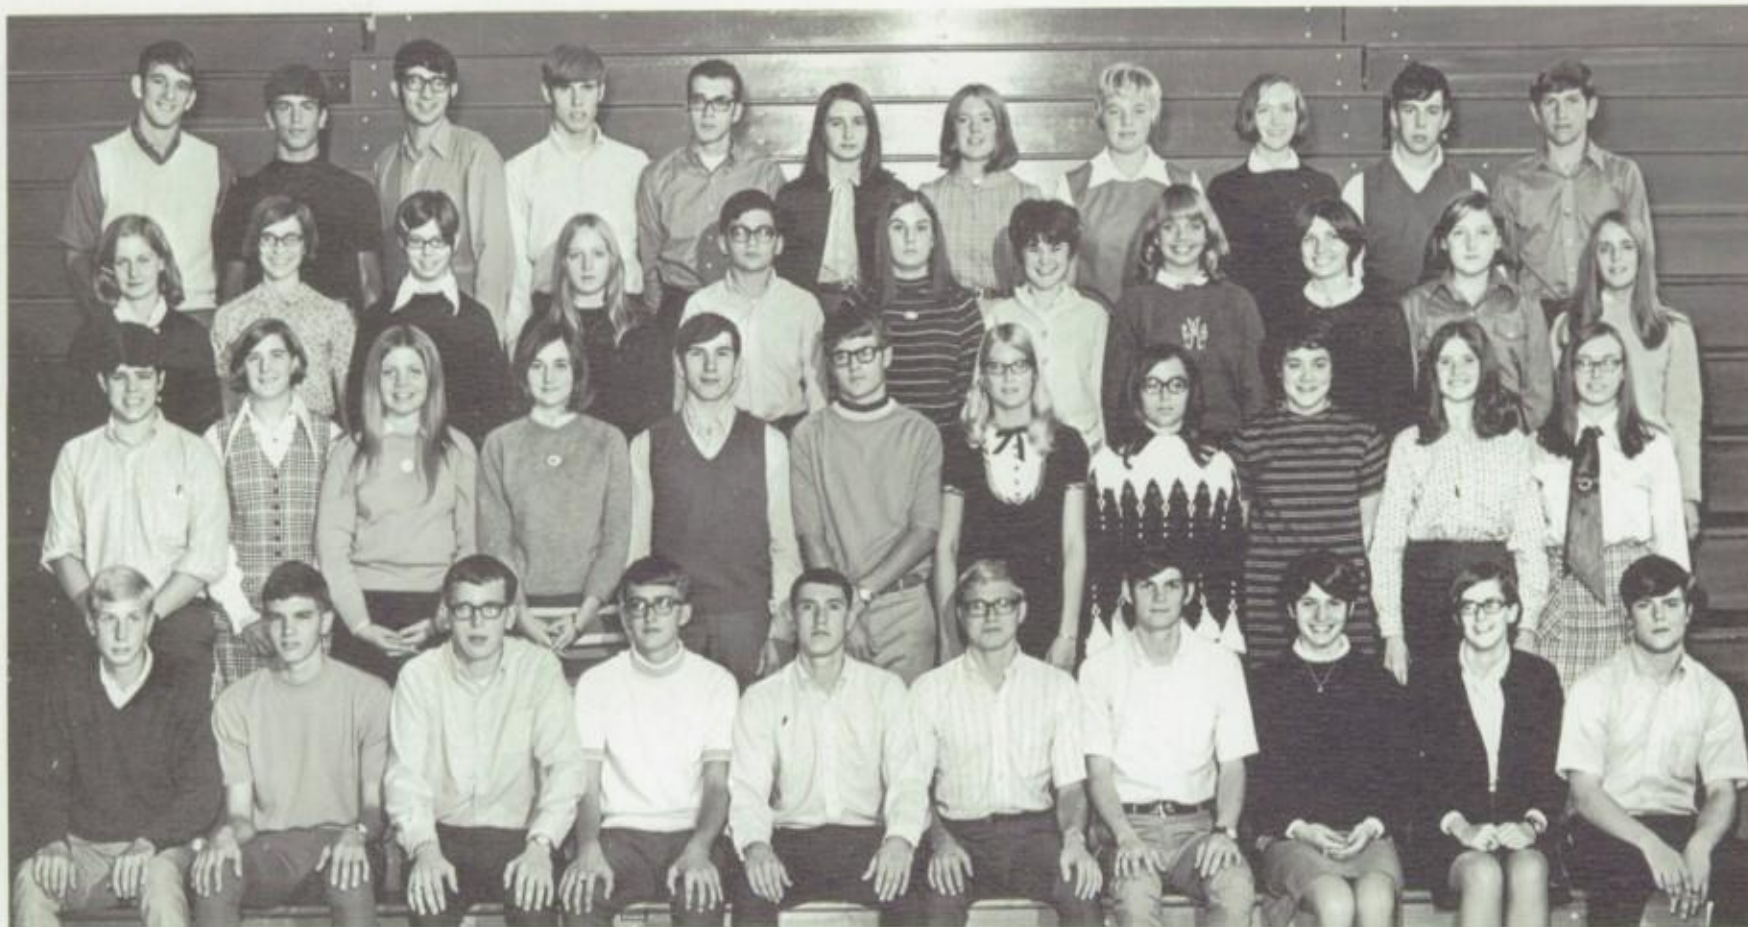

Establishing the new student store, council members could be observed trying to search through tons of stock for an item that "was just here a minute ago," or taking orders for sweaters and jackets.

Cornstalks and bales of hay decorated the cafeteria for the "Sadie Hawkins" dance. The council sponsored a contest to spark enthusiasm in the student body to attend winter sports events. A running count of students present at the basketball, wrestling and swimming matches was totaled and a plaque awarded to the class with the best attendance.

Pep, spirit, pride and enthusiasm characterized this years varsity cheerleading squad. Present at football, basketball, wrestling and swimming events, the cheerleaders increased school spirit.

The squad was comprised of Barb Dudzinsky, head; Marilyn Check, co-head; Janice Joseph and Julie Mattioli. Junior members were Dianne Neely, Cheryl Grace, Pat Watkins and Debbie Zera. Neil Lynch acted as the Wildcat mascot.

Last summer the group attended a cheerleading camp where they captured first place in group competition, based upon the execution of their cheers. Mrs. Jacqueline Cavanaugh and Mrs. Deborah Miller served as the cheerleaders sponsors.

Journalists produce top award winners

Rushing to hand in "High Post" assignments, typewriters clicking in the back room, writing ads for the year-book, searching the school for news, helping each other with stories, year-book pictures, looking up synonyms for a word, writing headlines, learning the news before anyone else, proof-reading copy, counting words, planning the Quill and Scroll banquet, all filled the hectic days of the 1969-1970 publications staff.

Though sometimes frustrated and always very busy, the staff members enjoyed and benefited from their experiences in journalism. The student publications, "The High Post" and "Latrobean" again earned top awards in state and national contests.

Business manager Lorraine Spinelli reviews business procedures with Sue Bolish and Joan Svidron. "High Post" editor, Sue Steinbeck, offers some helpful criticism to fellow page editors Barb Dudzinsky, Marianne Tua, Tom McCarthy and John Robbins. Assistant page editors Marilyn Check, Denise Soohey and Sylvia Stouffer discuss the "Watcha Column." "Latrobean" editors Tom Hewitt, Fred Stover, Charlene Watkins, Debbie Ferrarini, Jane Fowler, Sandy Wandrisco and Janice Joseph work to meet a deadline.

Junior reporters, Leslie Jackman, Sherry Fletcher, Mike Dudzinsky, Ida Mahady and Roberta Burd, read exchanges to find new ideas for stories. Jeri Chamberlain, Joyce Popp, Linda Zabkar and Gail Thomas review rules of style to help write better copy for the newspaper.

Kathy Lamosek, Diane Kozusko, Jack Goldman and Sue Rennie search past publications for ideas. Advertising managers, Paula Arbore, Patty Sweeney and Dave Campbell teach the juniors advertising techniques.

Tim Taylor, Bruce Huber and Ken Henry recite their lines to Senior Class Play student director Sandy Shirey. Fred Stover, as Jonathan Brewster, strangles his sidekick Dr. Einstein portrayed by Tom Hewitt. John Robbins, as Mortimer Brewster, warns Keith Lewis. Accompanying Mortimer is his fiancée Mary Jo Harvey and Bruce Caldwell, her father.

"Arsenic and Old Lace," a three-act comedy about two little old women who indulge in the charity of poisoning elderly men was enacted by the members of the Senior Class on November 22, 1969.

Mortimer Brewster, portrayed by John Robbins, attempted to conceal the antics of his Aunt Abbey and Aunt Martha played by Michelle Jacobina and Bonnie Downs.

To add to the confusion Mortimer betrothed Elaine Harper, portrayed by Mary Jo Harvey, became suspicious of their behavior. Upon the arrival of Johnathan Brewster, played by Fred Stover, and Doctor Einstein, portrayed by Tom Hewitt, the plot thickened. Tim Taylor played Teddy.

Other supporting characters were Tim Bell, Bruce Caldwell, Bruce Huber, Keith Lewis and Mike Voytek.

Juniors enact unusual drama

Void of scenery and props but with effective lighting, a nearly empty stage provided the setting for the Junior Class play, "Our Town". As stage manager, Doug Flodin introduced the audience to Grover's Corners, New Hampshire and to its leading citizens.

Included in the cast were Karen Stuckman, Dave Luttner, Mary Bougher, Tom Sprock, Cheryl Miller, John Riggs, Jenny Rogosky, Susanne Carter, Lynn Wolff, Jack Goldman, Bob Kendi, Michael Rezak, Tom Gongaware, Gail Thomas, Paula Tomashosky, Nancy Monzo, Cheryl Lawson, Robert Zannetti, Dave Hill, Ed Cicconi, Claudia Martin, Nancy Martin, Kathy Marucco, Liz Ruffin, Joan Svidron, Gloria Moyher and Linda Martin.

Members of the cast portray the dead of "Our Town" during Emily's funeral. Doug Flodin, Karen Stuckman, Jenny Rogosky and Dave Luttner rehearse a scene from Act II entitled "Love & Marriage". On a warm summer's night Tom Sprock, Mary Boucher, Cheryl Miller, and John Riggs sit and chat in the garden about the upcoming wedding of their children.

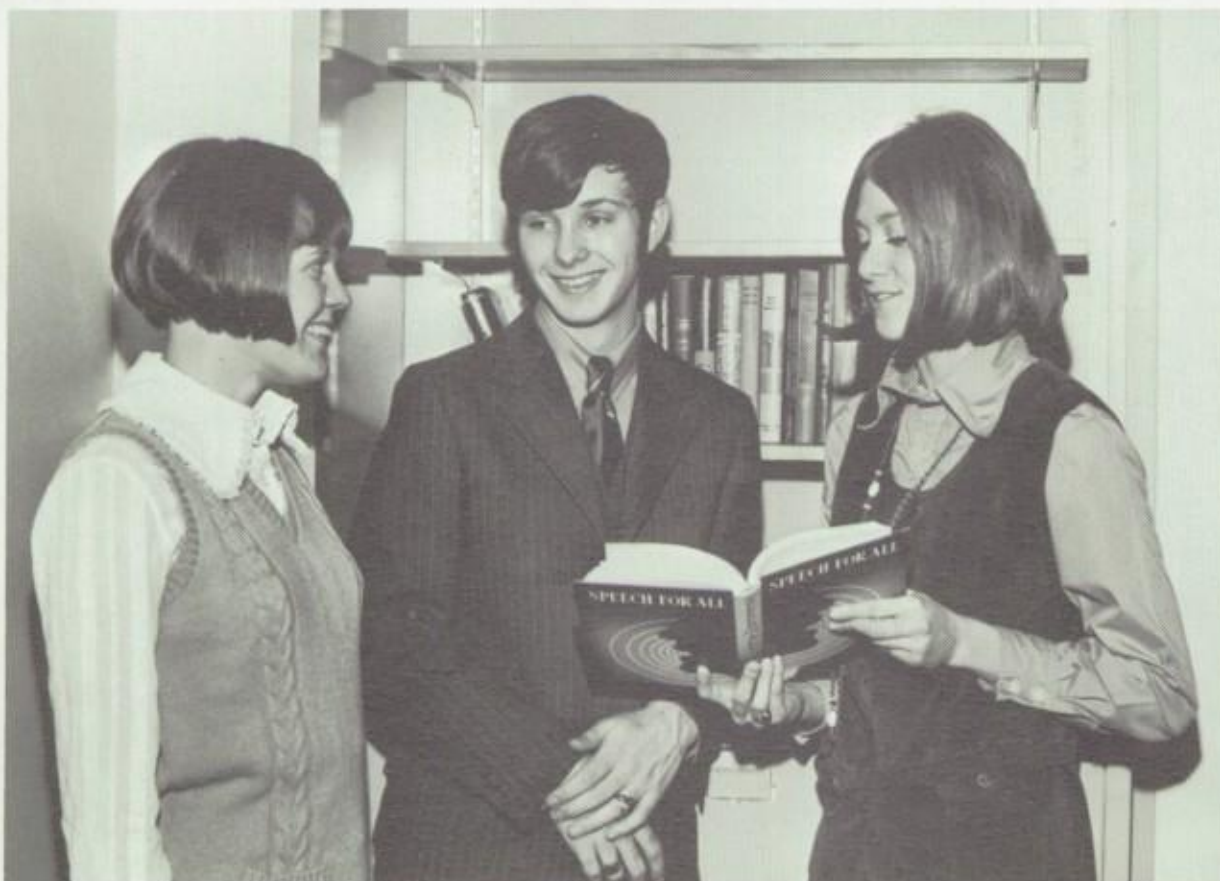

Speech students Bruce Caldwell, Marie Stack, Mary Biller, and Carl Neigoot discuss various medians of communication. Searching the "Tribune Review" for speech topics are Chuck Metzler, Betsy Watson and Mike Yeskey.

Pupils display speaking talent

Doug Flodin turns on the controls for Sue Nellis to begin the morning broadcast. Rich Strayer holds the microphone for Patty Doherty to record her speech as Karen McGuire listens for mistakes or improvements. Sandy Shirey listens as Ann Manoli reads John Robbins a passage from one of their speech books.

Helping the students to become better communicators through speaking and listening was one of the main objectives of the newly instituted speech program under the direction of Miss Beth Fairley.

Approximately 35 students took part in speech activities which were offered for the first time this year. Their objectives were accomplished through debates, group communications, speeches and discussions. The students also learned how voice and bodily movements are connected with public speaking.

Throughout the year students participating in the program spoke at several luncheons of local clubs and civic organizations such as the Rotary Club and the Women's Club.

AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE — An international scholarship organization, the AFS is an open door for friendship, peace, and understanding among the peoples of the world through student representatives.

With the absence of kangaroos and koala bear the United States is a unique and new world from Australia, the homeland of Latrobe's second AFS student, Jennifer Nelson. Adjusting to a new school and climate, there's no snow in Australia, Jenny was eager to try anything new or different which included skiing and watching her first football and basketball games.

Next year Latrobe's student may embark on an adventure similar to Jenny's, that of living in a foreign country.

Jennifer Nelson reviews schedule problems with Mrs. Luise Savage at the beginning of the year. AFS officers Susan Nellis, Jeff Shrum, Sherry Fletcher, Sandy Wandrisco, Beth Hazlett and Linda Rutter discuss ways to raise money. Juniors Karen Schmucker and Gayle Shearer consult an atlas.

As distribution time quickly approaches, Tim Repp and Nancy Martin receive their quota of freshly printed newspapers from Mary Deluka through the Dutch doors of the journalism room. Avoiding the early rush of the subscription deadline, Tom Hauger decides to purchase "The High Post" and "atrobean" from Marie Bodziak.

PUBLICATIONS REPRESENTATIVES

— Fifteen minutes before classes recessed, Publication Representatives scurried to room L-114 to receive "The High Posts."

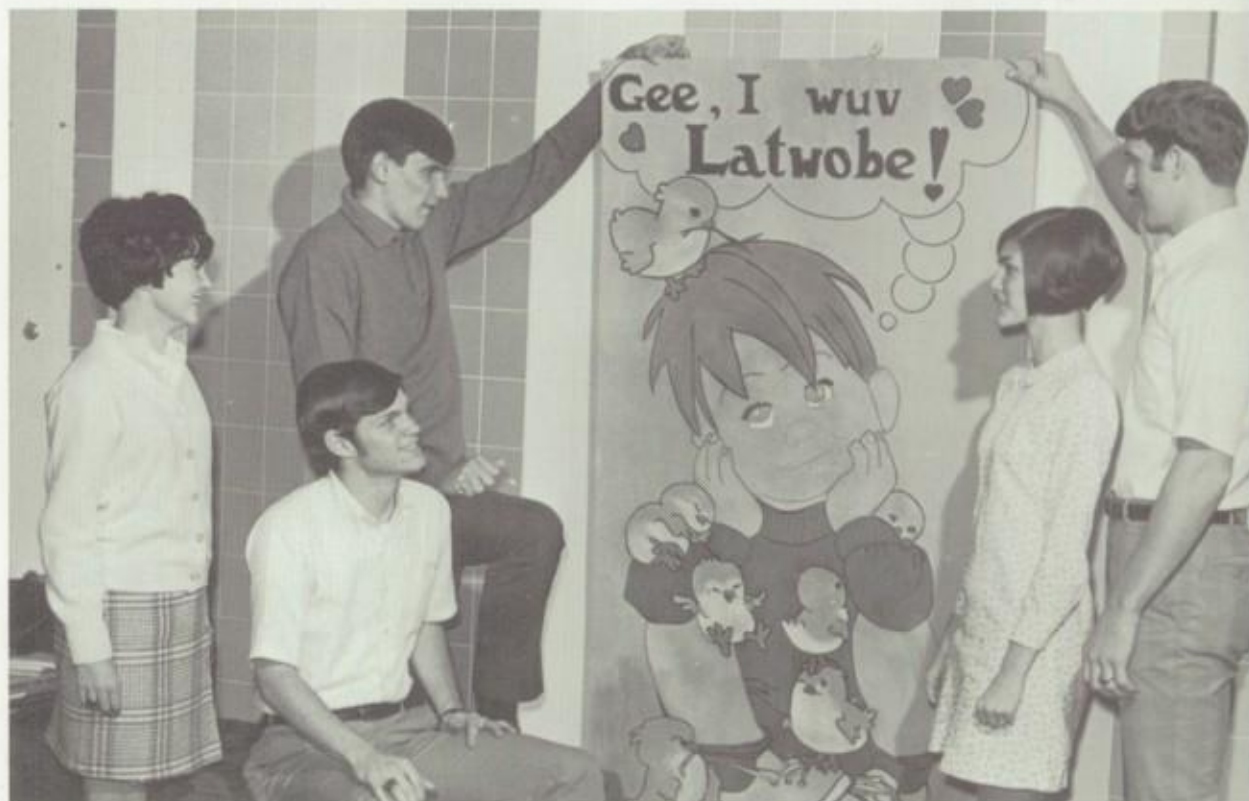

Aside from this responsibility, the representatives who were elected by their classmates, also assumed the task of accepting publication subscriptions. They completed their term of office by distributing yearbooks to the eager students.

PEP CLUB — "Cheer for Latrobe, cheer for Latrobe, shout out loud and long." These were the words sung by the 454 members of the Pep Club throughout the school year to boost their team on to victory.

These students not only cheered "Fight, Fight, Fight" to their team, but sponsored a poster contest between classes. For recognition night the senior members of the club purchased corsages. More boys aided in the task of instilling School spirit, than ever before.

Pep Club officers Jeff Meholic, Tom Marucco, Nancy Maloney, Clark Kerr and Mary Biller admire the fine texture of an ornate masterpiece which greets incoming pupils in the student lobby. Craig Bryson snarls at Rene Veto while she steals his booster sign. Road Runners at heart hang around watching Scott Rennie and Paula Riggi.

POSTER CLUB — Sparking school spirit and boosting student morale were the main objectives and accomplishments of the Poster Club. With their posters lining the halls, the entire school took on a meaningful appearance.

After the normal student work day was done, you could find gigantic rolls of paper covering the floor while the artists worked on the massive drawings that would eventually cover the walls.

Under the guidance of Mr. George Klim, the officers Kathy Marucco, president; Donna Morton, vice-president; and Karen Stuckman, secretary-treasurer; planned and organized the club's activities. As a recognition of their time and effort, the Poster Club members were given an award at the end of the term.

Cleaning paint brushes is part of the work involved in poster making for Kittie Macey, Kathy Lehman and Georgette Luttner. Donna Martin and Karen Stuckman admire their finished poster while Kathy Marucco sketches the figure. Linda Rutter, Janet Hamilton and Jim Stephanic inspect Francis Marshall's drawing.

The band and majorettes stiffen with pride and display their loyalty to the school by playing and singing the Alma Mater during the pre-game ceremonies. Keeping step and time with the beat of the drum the band members march off the field after an entertaining half-time show.

Leading the colorguard during their pre-game performance are Gail Thomas, Lynn Kepple and Sue Nellis. In her last performance at Memorial Stadium, head majorette Sandy Shirey gives her senior salute to the audience.

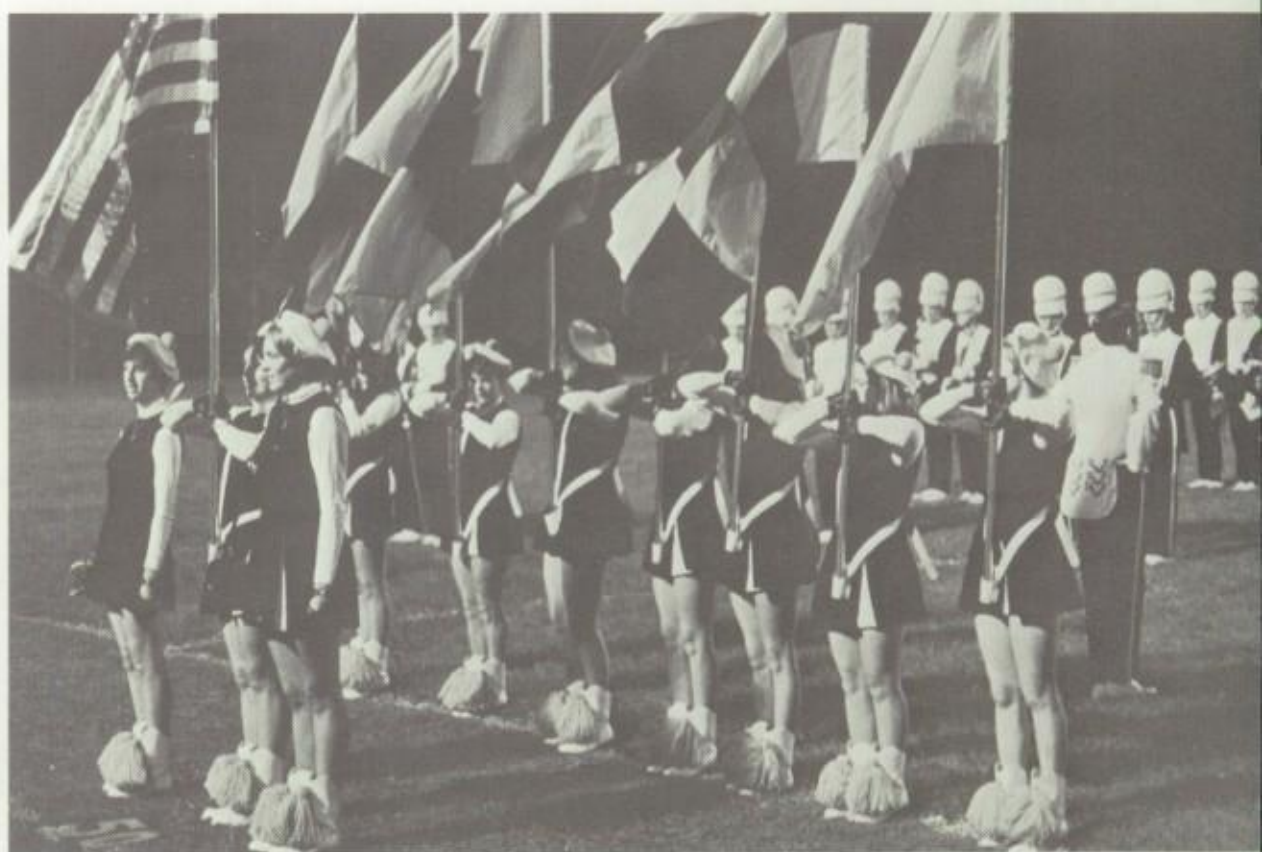

As the football field cleared at half-time, drum major Dave Palmer assumed his position and a mass of black-clad, white-shod band members found their positions. Four sharp whistles introduced an opening number of "It's Today" and the band took the field.

Seven orange and black show flags carried by the color guard, whipped in the breeze and the majorettes' lighted batons spun high in the air to the beat of such features as "Macarena" and "Up, Up and Away."

When football season reached its finale, marches were exchanged for concert preparation. Encompassing many forms of music, the spring concert signified the end.

Nineteen girls gathered together at the beginning of the school year and began work on twirling routines and flag drills that they would perform when they marched along side the band. Throughout the football season and numerous parades, the girls composing the majorette and color guard corps marched to add color, smiles, skill and appeal to the band.

This year's majorette squad includes the following: KNEELING — Debbie Huser, Sandy Shirey, head Janice Ziedel. STANDING — Laurie Murphy, Cheryl Miller, Sherry Blasek, Nancy Monzo, Debbie Robb and Debbie Shirey. Members of the colorguard stand ready for the half time performance to begin.

When snow covered those once-familiar yellow yard lines, the band relaxed in their concert chairs and prepared for the spring concert. Subdivisions of the band developed in the form of the Wind Ensemble, Brass Choir and Stage Band. The latter group participated in competition with other area stage bands. Each of these groups performed various melodies for concerts, festivals and assemblies.

Football crowds and concert audiences have but to remember the efforts put forth by the band, while the members themselves can remember all that went in to making the season the best yet!

With the aid of Mr. William Tepper as director, a new group formed this year, the Brass Choir. Some eight people belonged to this group.

Denny Harr tells of his love for Bonnie Downs in the Song "Long Ago." After his first experience with "Old Methusela" whiskey, Denny Harr is escorted home by John Poklembo, his coldhearted boss. Regular customers of the "Hope And Anchor" Bar salute Roberta Burd, "Laura" during a practice session.

"Half-a-Sixpence," this year's musical, was the story of a penniless draper named Kipps who gives his token to Bonnie Downs, a young parlormaid.

Kipps, played by Denny Harr, suddenly finds himself a rich man, as a result of an unknown inheritance which is brought to his attention by Chitterlow, played by Bruce Caldwell.

Complications arise when he becomes engaged to Janet Smith in the role of Helen, a high society snob, only to realize his heart still belongs to Ann. Kipps then loses his inheritance and finds that "money isn't everything" and "love conquers all."

Dramatic coach and choreographer was Mr. James Mikula.

Dancers in this year's musical "Half-a-Sixpence" pause with their partners during rehearsal. Apprentices and shop girls arrive at the Emporium to begin another day's work. Mike Florina, young Walshingham, escorts Shelly Jacobina, Mrs. Botting, on to the promenade.

Approximately 475 students were members of the Modern Language Club. This organization strove to promote interest and to help broaden the knowledge of the French and the Spanish languages.

The Modern Language Club this year undertook a new endeavor — the adopting of an overseas orphan. Beatriz Fernandez from Bolivia was adopted through the auspices of the Christian Children's Fund, in Richmond, Virginia.

Highlighting the activities were a "Snowball Bash" dance, the annual Mardi Gras and the bowling tournament.

Serving as King and Queen for the Mardi Gras were Tom Marucco and Sandy Shirey.

The officers were as follows: Barb Dudzinsky, president; Carolyn Schimpf, vice-president; Janice Pohland, secretary; Neil Lynch, treasurer; and Student Council representative, Pat Watkins.

Pat Bucholtz, Gail Brewsher, Sue Repko, Kathie Schott and Jane Shirey read the magazines in the library.

LIBRARY ASSISTANTS — During each school day many books were taken in and out of the library. Seventeen girls and two boys worked under the direction of Miss Mary Fultz, librarian, to make possible this large circulation.

Some library assistants stamped books while others were stationed at the door to collect passes. They neatly arranged shelves and put books in order.

Assistants check regular papers

Senior librarians Karen Dempsey, Michele Keefe, Arlene Treskovich and Orville Dishong make use of the newspapers and magazines available in the library.

Senior Linda Kozielec reviews with fellow ushers Kathleen Macey, Diane Kibe and Carlotta Klock a few of the procedures. Joan Svidron, Gladys Knaus, Shirley Gray and Judy Jones examine the seating chart of the auditorium in preparation for an evening concert. Usher Debra Kern discusses the distribution of programs with fellow ushers Mary Karpesky, Karen Davis and Susan Dick. Ushers Michele Keefe, Marsha Miller and Emmy Lou Noel check coats for students going to the play.

USHERS — There are jobs that are covered with glory and there are others which are just covered.

Such tasks are taken for granted, and the service itself is often its own reward. One such responsibility is that of an usher. The polite, well-groomed usher who collects the tickets and guides one to a seat, goes by unnoticed.

Under the direction of Miss Gail Nugent and Miss Janet Dunlap, some 23 self-sacrificing young women went about their duties knowing that their contribution made the show or performance.

AVIATION CLUB — Although the Aviation Club had no formal meetings and didn't elect officers this year, they did make several field trips to the local Tri-City Airport and one to the Greater Pittsburgh Airport.

Most of the activity of the 18 active members of the club was carried on in the classroom of Mr. James Taylor's Aviation and Aerospace classes. Here they studied subjects like meteorology, aeronautical terms, and airplane mechanics and structure to help them when they would finally solo. The course provides all of the ground training needed for a private pilots license.

CAMERA CLUB — "The club not only provides us with a good place to learn but also a fine source of entertainment" stated a senior Camera Club member.

This year's organization, under the direction of Mr. Thomas Grote, utilized the school's darkroom facilities as the 20 members developed and printed their own pictures. The club, which consisted of seniors, juniors, and for the first time sophomores, photographed extracurricular activities.

Through the previous years candy sales, the club was able to add a print drying machine to their equipment.

Crew manages stage settings

STAGE CREW — A blast from the brass-lights and the action starts.

Little does anyone suspect what a transformation takes place on stage within the last few minutes before the curtain goes up. As the students sit in their assigned seats watching the show, few are aware of the work that goes on behind stage.

Under the direction of Mr. Harry Graham, the stage crew comes alive as they enact their parts in a small drama called "Assembly."

Eleven actors went through dress rehearsals as they took turns switching on colored stage lights and putting the right chairs in the right places. Whatever stagefright and frustration that did occur was quickly remedied through efforts of the stage crew.

FIRE PATROL — Seven members of the Fire Patrol are prepared to protect everyone if the fire bell rings. They escort the students from the building when the alarm is given and are ready to use the extinguishers in a minor blaze.

Mr. Earl Karasak, who is the patrol's adviser, assigned positions, duties and responsibilities and, along with the school administrators, oversaw the program.

If a major fire should ignite, the Fire Patrol has been trained to promote the safe, orderly passage of students from the building, to discourage panic, and that every window is closed and all the lights are off.

Three members of the Fire Patrol, Mark Dahlman, Mark Canterna and Walter Hazlett, examine a fire extinguisher and review the procedures for evacuating pupils and teachers from the building with safety the most important guardian.

Society honors top students

Acquiring membership to the National Honor Society is considered one of the highest achievements for a student. The basis for admission into this honorary society are scholastic achievement, character, leadership, and service in school life.

Juniors and seniors, who ranked in the upper-fourth of the classes, were eligible for consideration for membership. The faculty voted on this group of students with the proper qualifications.

One of the main objectives of the NHS was to recognize intelligent students of strong character while emphasizing the need for further education. Mr. Raymond Halula acted as sponsor of the NHS.

Inductees enter honorary groups

Among the honorary groups of the school, one of the leading organizations was the French National Honor Society.

Membership qualifications included an A average for either the fifth, sixth, or seventh semesters of language study, then maintaining a B average for the remainder of the year. Students were also selected by their academic merits in all subjects. The club was sponsored by Mrs. Clare Stover.

The Spanish National Honor Society is an honorary organization whose purpose is to promote the further study of Spanish and its related languages. The requirements for admission were slightly changed enabling more students to be eligible.

Admission standards included an average of 4.00 in Spanish III or 3.50 in Spanish IV over a period of two semesters. Only juniors and seniors are eligible for admittance.

Excitement prevailed as the Wildcat athletic teams competed against their opponents. The student body turned out to cheer the football, basketball, wrestling, swimming, baseball and track squads on to victory. Although not in attendance at rifle, tennis, golf and cross-country events, the student body was interested in their success.

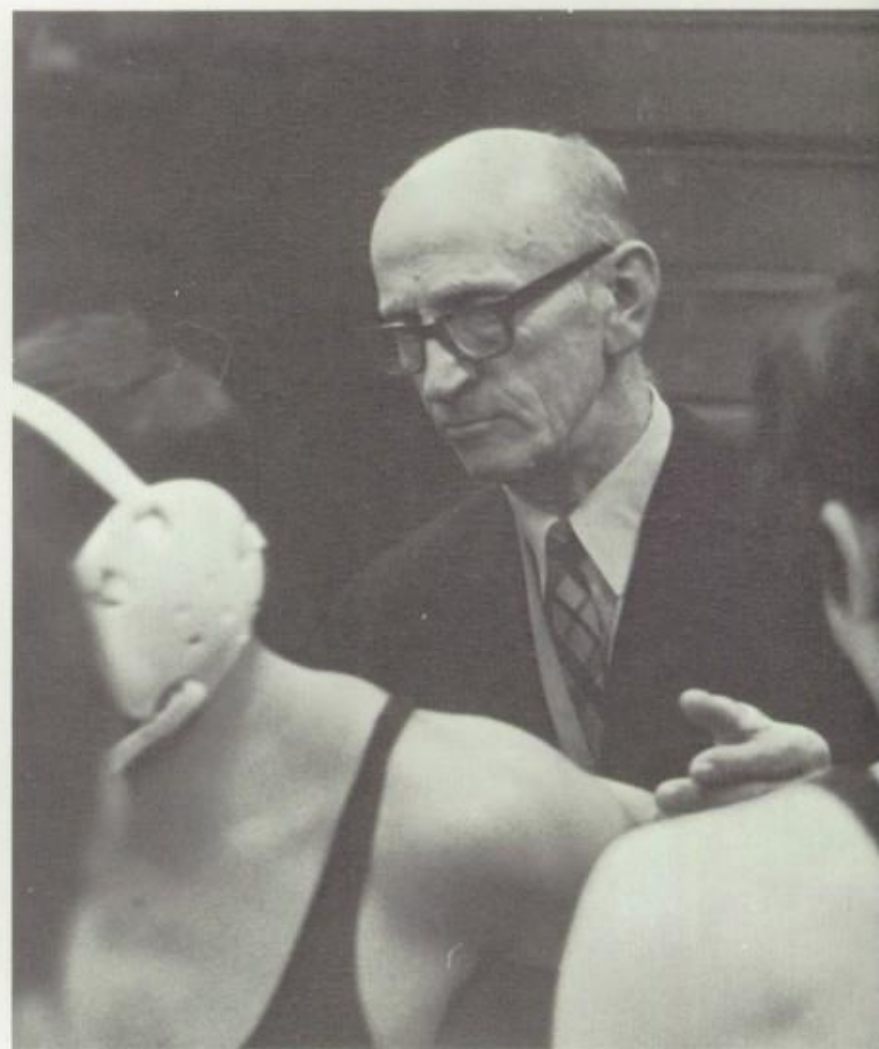

An expanded intramural program gave many boys and girls the opportunity to participate in sports. Interest ran high as teams from home rooms and individuals strove for victory. Gymnastics was introduced on an exhibition basis in preparation for varsity competition next year.

Qualifying athletes in varsity sports were awarded letters upon meeting set requirements.

As each sports season made its appearance, then faded into the background making room for its successor, the coaches, who gave of themselves in return for the satisfaction of helping the teams, were often forgotten as fans rushed to eulogize the players.

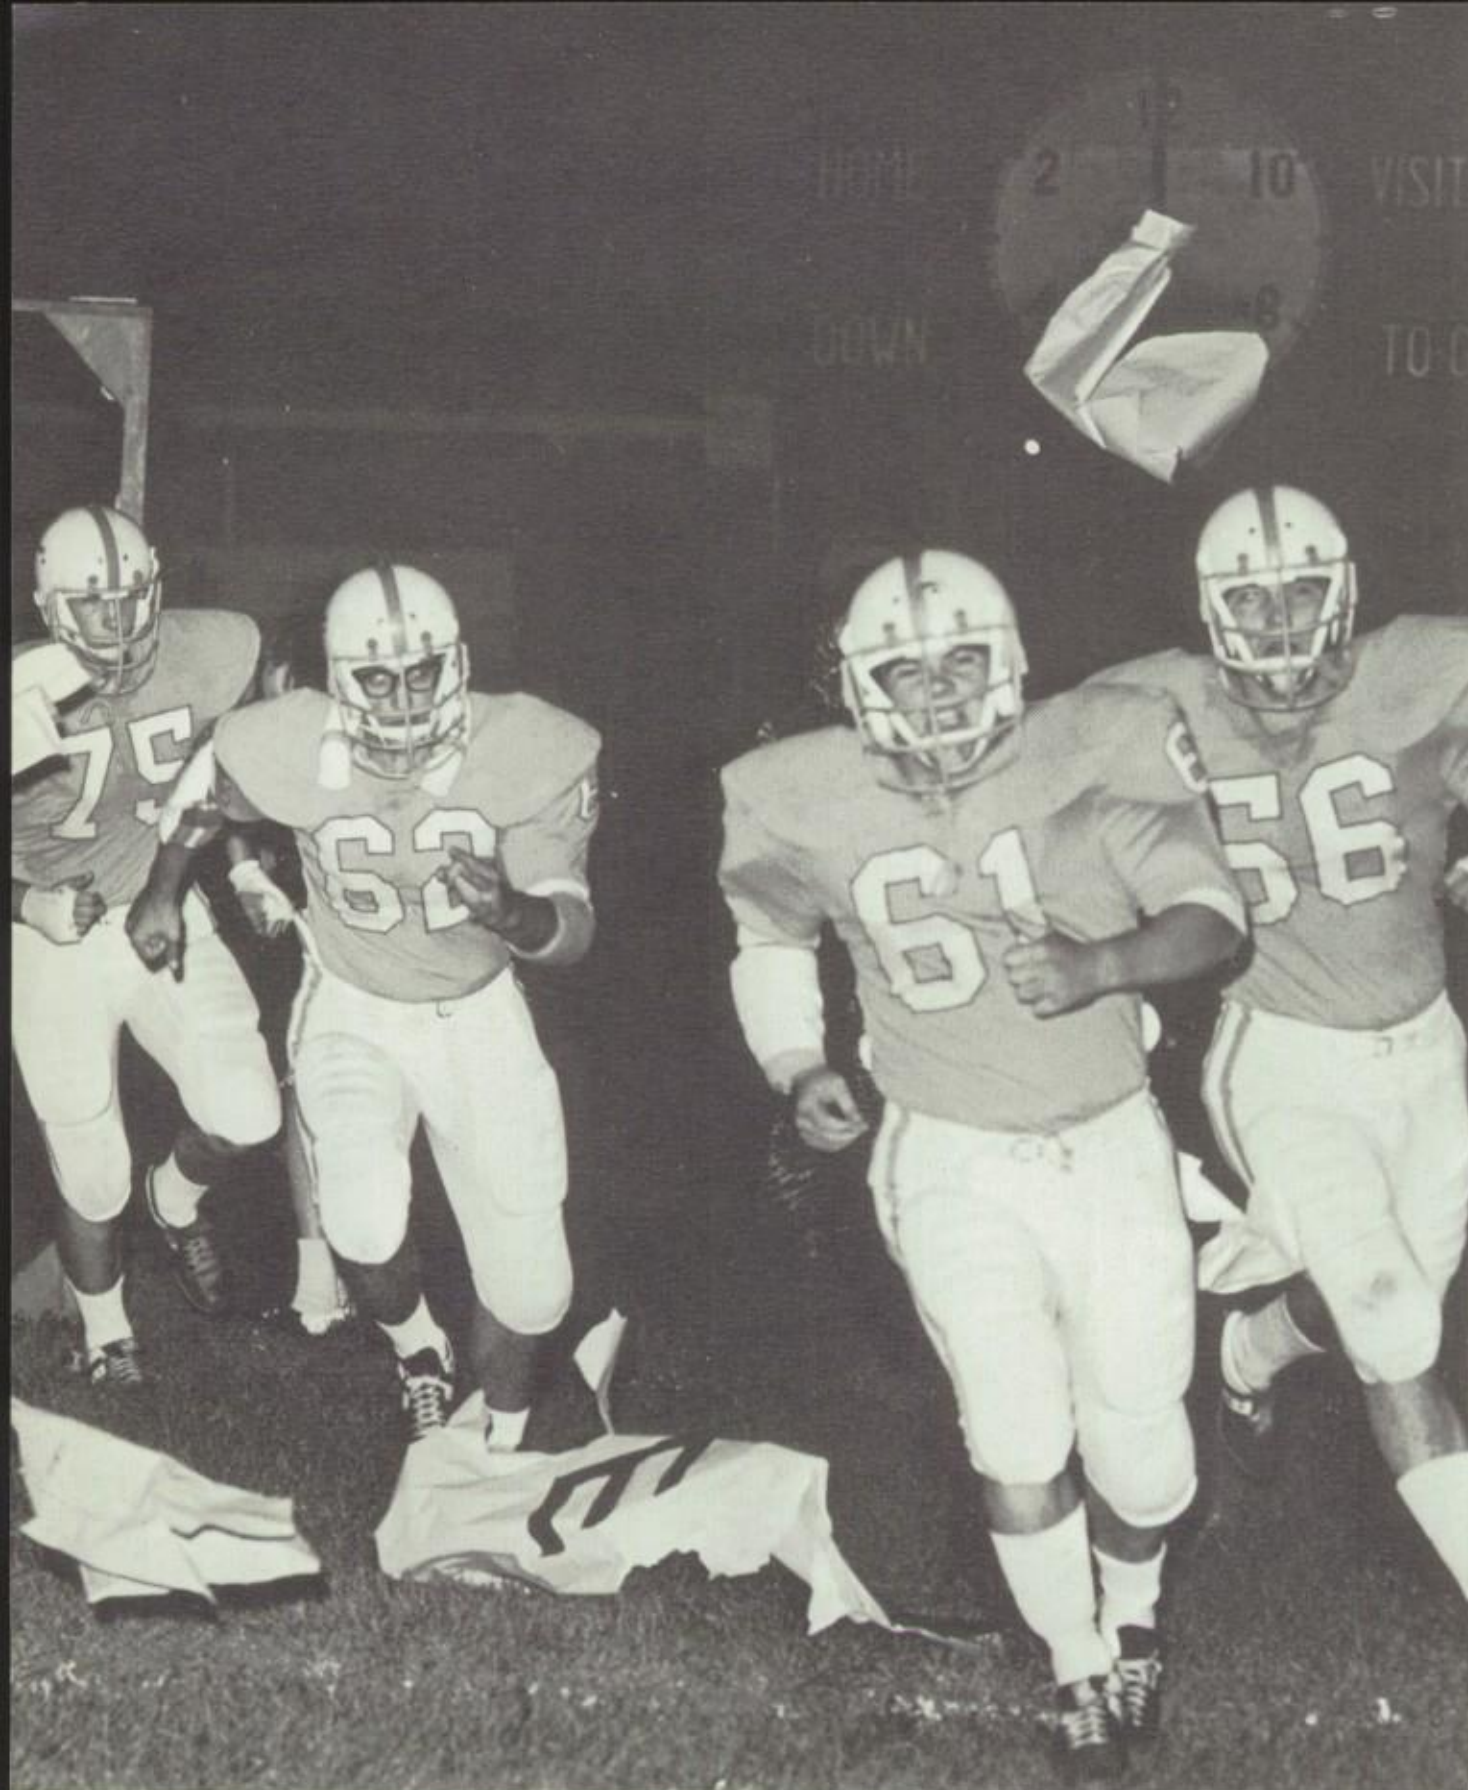

With the school year concluded, there is time to remember that behind each team stood dedicated men, the coaches. With the students and participants they shared the joy of victory and the anguish of defeat. Each contest meant something special to them, they assumed a responsibility as coach.

Coaches develop ability, pride

The faculty, in the process of teaching, became students themselves. An expanded curriculum provided teachers of new courses with an opportunity to experiment, to explore and convey new ideas in new ways. Faculty members took graduate courses to increase their store of knowledge and to open new fields of instruction.

New members of the faculty as well as student teachers gradually adjusted to a once new and different learning situation. They learned what the senior high had to offer and what they were capable of giving in return. More important, though, they became a vital part of the school.

Faculty members assumed the responsibility for many extracurricular activities and became involved in the active, on-the-move living which is Greater Latrobe.

The committees and their chairmen were as follows: Finance, Mr. Regis Kuhn; Property Planning, Mr. Clarence Graham; Activities and Recreation, Mr. Jacob Bendl; Cafeteria and Transportation, Mr. Richard Pohland.

Serving as president of the Board of Education was Mr. Oland Canterna. Other officers include Mr. Clarence Graham, vice-president, Mr. Ned Nakles, solicitor, and Miss Ruth Himler, secretary.

ROBERT E. LAVELLY
PRINCIPAL

RONALD E. PEDUZZI
ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL

Education for approximately 1500 Greater Latrobe students was an adventure in learning. Guiding the faculty who provided this experience was Principal Robert Lavelly.

In his initial year as the leader at the senior high, Mr. Lavelly oversaw the many changes introduced this year including a new report card and many additional curriculum offerings. His day started early in the morning and lasted until long after dismissal as he endeavored to insure a smooth operating school.

Mr. Ronald Peduzzi arrived early in March to assume the position of assistant principal. Among his many responsibilities, he checked attendance records, student driving permits and problems that occurred in the everyday operation of the school.

Dedicated secretaries in the office of the principal were Mrs. Betsy Tillman, Miss Dolores Horansky and Mrs. Beverly Depetris. Helping with the daily attendance, typing bulletins, filing information, typing letters and running-off necessary forms were among the every day tasks of these three employees.

Mrs. Beverly Depetris shows Miss Dolores Horansky and Mrs. Betsy Tillman the new report card filing system.

Assuming responsibility for the health program of the senior high students was the school medical staff.

Miss Kathryn Kintz, school nurse, was present in the health suite to attend to any illnesses. She also assisted Dr. F. Clay Gibson, head of the medical staff, in giving physical exams, hearing and visual exams, dental exams, tuberculin tests and keeping student health records complete and up to date.

Home and school visitor, Mr. William West, aided the school nurse and administrators by taking care of the absentee problems throughout the district schools.

Under the supervision of two instructors, 25 students attending special education courses in room B-218 participated in a work-study program during the 1969-1970 school term.

By working in various local stores during one half of the day, they prepared for skilled and unskilled full-time employment in stores and industry. While in school these pupils attended classes in typing, academic reading, shop, writing, modern mathematics, home economics, chorus and art.

Special practical paperbacks written for students in this department were the basic texts used.

Throughout the 1969-70 school term the aim of the Guidance Department was to aid students in realizing their abilities and limitations. Counselors helped pupils prepare for the future by discussing post-graduation plans with each student.

This year more individual attention was possible when the guidance staff was increased to four counselors.

A new aid to the students this year was the addition of a career reference room located in the library. The information available there benefited the student by enabling them to do independent research.

In addition to this facility, the counselors strove to form a more personal relationship with pupils by counseling each student individually.

'Cavalcade' encourages reading, fortifies vocabulary usage

Working under the direction of Mrs. Dolores Baroli, department head, the English staff taught new courses with new texts and aids. The instructors strived to enable each student to have a greater appreciation and understanding of the English language and of literature.

Anthologies, which were introduced to sophomore English classes last year, are now being used by the juniors as well. The books expose the student to the works of world and American authors.

Vocabulary books were also initiated into use this school year. It is hoped the juniors and seniors taking college boards may benefit from the use of these workbooks.

For the first time the department offered students the opportunity to improve their abilities in specialized fields of the subject by offering the courses, Composition and Speech and Oral Interpretation. The course in speech, which replaced the former Broadcasting I, II classes, provides the student body and faculty with informative broadcasts. Another future aim of the course is to provide students an opportunity to compete in interscholastic speech competition.

Future department plans include further broadening of the present curriculum with studies advancing into the areas of drama and the novel. These two courses may be initiated next year.

Pupils were instructed both in the class room and while receiving actual experience on the road. Visual aids such as films and demonstrations were also used to help the student realize the power and responsibility that he holds whenever he is behind the wheel of the family car.

Driving trainees studied the theories of defensive driving, car maintenance, and traffic safety in preparation for obtaining their driver's licenses. By the end of the year participants had been taught how to "drive and stay alive."

The Social Studies Department was affected by the curriculum changes this year with several new courses being added and changes made in subject contents.

The new subjects included Economics and the alternate United States History. Economics, a one semester course, covered basic principles and practices of modern economics. Some of the areas studied were business, banking, investment and the role of government. The alternate U.S. History course offered this year was designed to help students who have trouble with their reading, writing and comprehension skills.

World Cultures was dropped this year. Instead, sophomores took United States History along with the eleventh grade students. World Cultures will be back on the schedule again next year, but it will be as an elective for juniors and not a required subject for tenth graders.

Preparing students for post high school education and making the students realize the importance of mathematics in everyday life were among the objectives of the Math Department.

To give every student the opportunity to study the type of math he or she wanted, the math teachers under Miss Mary Louise McBride, taught a variety of courses in the field of mathematics. These included Basic Geometry, Combined Geometry, Algebra 1-2, 3-4, Basic Algebra 1-2 and Integrated Algebra and Trigonometry. Two courses added to the curriculum were Modern General Math and an Analytical Geometry class for selected seniors.

With the introduction of the math research room this year, more students were engaged in independent study than ever before. This room contained many types of games and electronic equipment designed to stimulate the students' interest in the study of mathematics.

Basic Field Biology and Geology was also introduced into the curriculum for the first time. It was taught for one semester by Mr. Harry Graham, Astronomy teacher, and one by Mr. Leroy Schaller, Biology teacher.

Another new subject, Power Home Mechanics, was also introduced this year and has been welcomed by the student body who according to Mr. Karasack stated, "The new subjects have been enthusiastically accepted."

The students achieved this goal with the aid of six instructors and a variety of new equipment. The department also instituted a number of intramural programs so that many students could enjoy some relaxation from the classroom.

Remedial instruction was offered to those students who were not able to attend regular gym classes. In this class, students played golf, shuffleboard and pingpong. Senior Lifesaving was added to the curriculum for the first time this year.

In order to help to keep up with the changing needs of business and industry, the Business Department added three new electives to the courses of study.

Notehand, Personal Typing and Data Processing were the three additions to the curriculum which previously included shorthand, typing and bookkeeping. The Notehand and Personal Typing courses were aimed at helping the college bound student, while the Data Processing course introduced the business student to the computer field.

Two other electives which further benefited students were Office Practice and on the job training. Office Practice was especially beneficial to students who wished to become secretaries because it trained them to use business equipment. On the job training, working in the surrounding business stores, was taken by qualified students.

Under the guidance of eight teachers, students received valuable training that would benefit them in the business or college world.

Mrs. Clare Stover headed the Language Department, consisting of faculty members. The subjects offered included French I through IV, German I, II, Latin II, Spanish I through IV.

For seniors, perhaps, memories are the most important. They will never again experience high school happenings, so memory is what they have to cling to. Physics books, water fountain chats, and morning assemblies may be forgotten but the football team of 1968, the play-off game at Pitt Fieldhouse and graduation will be perpetually remembered.

Juniors can recall their first prom, their first encounter with H_2S and their first post-college boards headache. They have also spent a year anticipating their coming glory when they at last will become the "mighty, mighty seniors!"

Sophomores know the full meaning of the word "upperclassmen." They too share a sense of accomplishment for they have learned to adjust to a new school world.

C L A S S E S

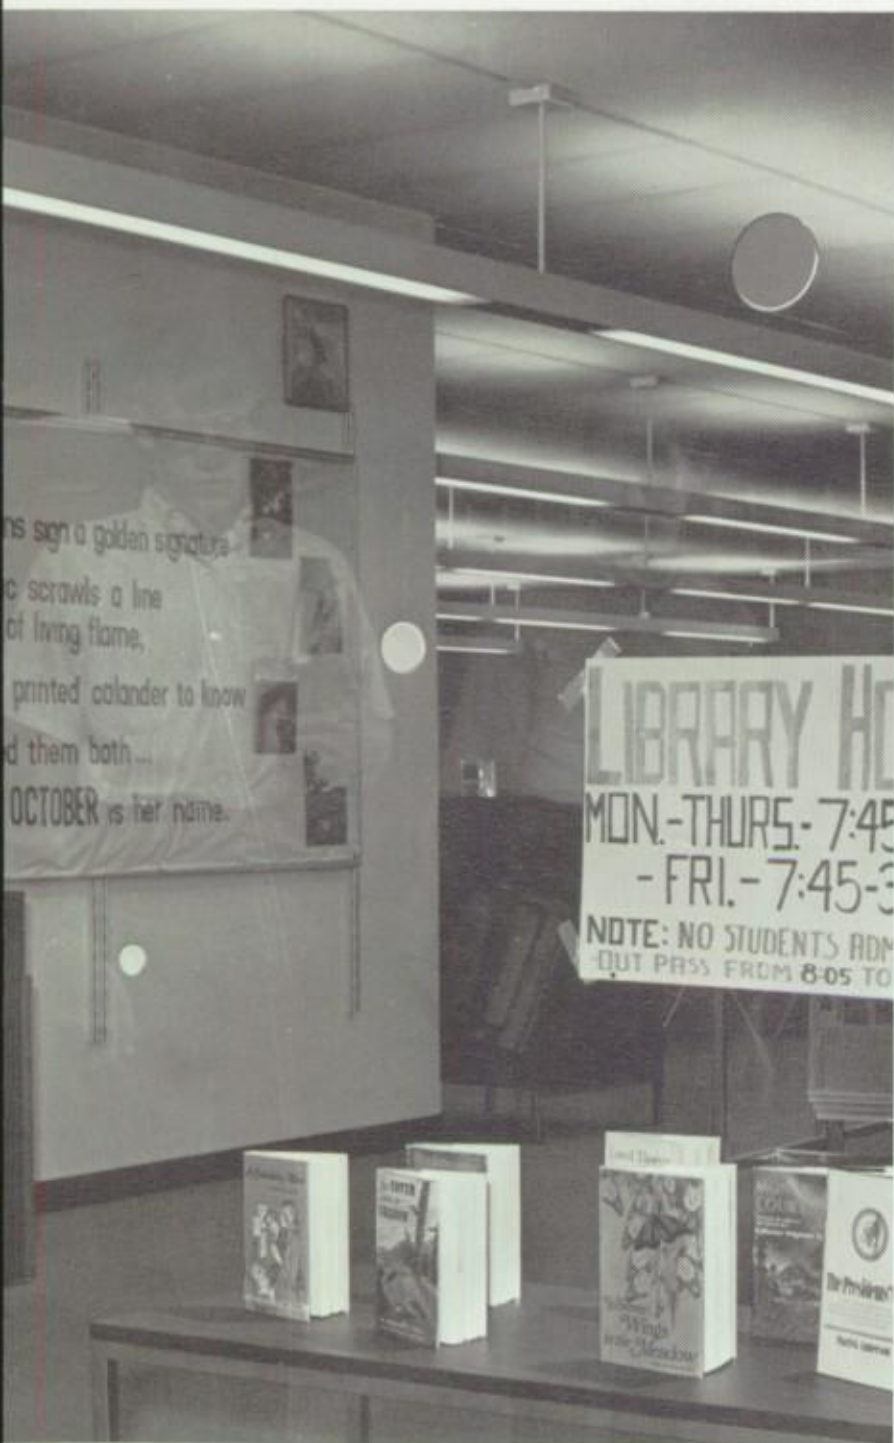

Confused expressions were worn on the faces of many sophomores during the opening weeks of school. After becoming familiar with new classes and the building, the tenth graders soon began taking an active part in school life.

Underclassmen displayed their artistic abilities in the class decorating contest. Athletically inclined sophomores were eager participants in varsity, junior varsity competition and in intramural volleyball, tennis and swimming.

The class of '72 selected Bruce Sulkey, as president. Elected to perform duties of other offices include the following: Bob Newmeyer, vice-president; Kathy Reille, secretary; Mindy O'Leary, treasurer and Tom Kissell, Student Council Representative.

JV cheerleaders spark spirit

Officers lead eleventh graders; Juniors enter honorary societies

Debbie Pudlish and Amy Hawkins review their French lesson in the lab. Junior officers, Tom Eupizi, Jenny Rogosky, Pat Dillion, Tony Quatrini and Rich Kruzynski discuss class activities. Pam Hollenbaugh asks Bill Kenly to throw away some paper.

Students pass through the inner mall on their way to the next class. Rosemary Kubit, Susan Mock, and Doug Reintgen glance through college catalogues as they wait to meet with their counselors. Field Biology students inspect a young tree as a class assignment.

"Advance" is the key word in describing the outlook of the class of '71 as they assumed their roles as juniors this year. While accepting the bigger "piece of the action" that moving ahead offered, eleventh grades learned to shoulder greater responsibilities.

During the past year, many teamed-up with guidance counselors to make their first important plans for the future. Others discovered hidden talents in art, music, composition, forensics and dramatics.

The most exciting accomplishment for athletic-minded students may have been making the varsity team, while for others it may have been attending the junior-senior prom or qualifying for the National Honor Society.

Elected to lead the junior class in their advancements were the following: Rich Kruzynski, president; Tony Quatrini, vice-president; Jenny Rogosky, secretary; Tom Eupizi, treasurer; and Pat Dillon, Student Council representative.

Seniors learn cooking skills

Being a senior meant being the leaders of the devotion and the pride of the school.

A senior's life was composed of pep rallies, play rehearsals, classes, prom preparation and varsity sports. No matter what the cause, these students demonstrated their concern. The twelfth grade classes both challenged and stimulated the seniors to obtain knowledge and a good grade.

Graduation meant academic robes in a long line that moved slowly down the aisle. It also meant receiving a diploma with gladness and pride and grief at the thought of parting with fellow members of the class of 1970.

Commencement was a big stride toward the portals of maturity. It was the beginning of a new way of life containing new ideas, courage and hope, fear and fulfillment.

James Stepanic was elected to lead the class of 1970. Vice-president was Dennis Jones. Beth Hazlett was secretary and Paula Arbore served as treasurer. Jeff Meholic held the position of Student Council representative.

Denny Jones and Jeff Meholic display the class flag to fellow officers Paula Arbore, Beth Hazlett, and Jim Stepanic. Fred Stover reads the directions about how to operate the computer to Mike McCamy and Dick Wilt. Paula Clark and Shelly Jacobina spruce up between classes. While cooking up a storm in Chefs Orientation, the boys taste a sample for perfection.

Nine seniors chosen to be outstanding in fields by their classmates were as follows: SEATED — Janet Uring, homemaking; Barbara Dudzinsky, leadership; Paula Arbore, commercial. STANDING — Sandy Wandrisco, journalism; John Robbins, dramatics; Denny Jones, athletics; Mark Gesalman, scholarship; Denny Harr, music; John Thomas, industrial arts.

Nine seniors were voted outstanding by their classmates in recognition for their achievements.

Head cheerleader Barb Dudzinsky was selected for leadership qualities. She was a member of NHS, Mu Alpha Theta, National Biology Honor Society, Quill and Scroll and served as president of MLC her senior year. She also received Outstanding Teenager of America Award. Honored as outstanding senior in scholarship, Mark Gesalman, was a member of Mu Alpha Theta, Spanish National Honor Society, NHS. He served as president of the band. Selected as outstanding in athletics was Dennis Jones. He was a three-year football and track letterman and served as co-captain of the wrestling squad. In his senior year he was vice-president of the class.

Sandy Wandrisco excelled in the field of journalism. She was the Latrobean editor, president of Quill and Scroll and AFS, a member of NHS, French National Honor Society and Mu Alpha Theta.

His acting ability earned John Robbins the dramatics position. He had the male lead in the Senior and Junior class plays and participated in the summer stock at St. Vincent College. He also was a finalist in the Shakespeare reading division of the Women's Club Contest.

Selected as outstanding in Industrial Arts was John Thomas. He was a member of the golf squad. Paula Arbore, president of the Business Education Club, received the Commercial recognition. She was treasurer of the Senior Class and a member of Quill and Scroll.

Janet Uring showed her talent in homemaking. Named as outstanding in music was Denny Harr. He portrayed the male lead in the musical his junior and senior years. He also served as president of the choir.

The high school students form a common age group — a market group with common characteristics. It is to this group, you the student, that the advertisers in this yearbook have designed their message. The merchants and industries represented in this section of the annual have shown an interest in you and your school. You should recognize them as being the leaders of the community.

We honor . . .

The efforts of teachers go on long after they retire. Their dedication to the profession lives on. The Latrobe staff, on behalf of the student body, wish to extend our sincere thanks to Mr. Herbert Bitner, Mr. George Rise and Mr. William Chafin for their many years of dedicated service.

The 1970 'Latrobean' staff . . .

Memories are the only things we have for certain; the past is the only thing of which we are positive.

As time passes, the once familiar and never-to-be forgotten faces and names depart from our minds. However, by turning the pages of our yearbook the faces, names and happenings associated with these friends are easily recalled.

To we seniors this year's book is perhaps the most important one we have received. For after graduation we will no longer walk the halls of Greater Latrobe Senior High School with our friends. Each must go a separate way, realizing that the happiness of high school can never again be captured as reality. Memories must take the place of reality and our yearbooks provide the only key to that door which closes on our high school days.

We, the editors, wish to extend our deepest thanks to our adviser and those people who have helped in any way to complete the yearbook.

Kennametal turns powder into products for practically any industry you can name.

From the powder we make carbide — a man-made material almost as hard as a diamond. It's used to resist extremes of abrasion, corrosion, and temperature to make things work better and last longer.

For example, we make tools that cut metal and tools that bite into coal, ore, and rock. When he drills teeth for a filling, your dentist might use a burr made of our material. Or the snow tires on your car might be equipped with our Kengrip® studs.

Kennametal also provides radiation shielding for the atomic energy industry — as well as abrasion and corrosion resisting seal rings, valves, and nozzles used in chemical and petroleum processing — capacitor anodes for electronics — and a variety of products for other industries.

Founded in Latrobe, Pa., in 1938, Kennametal has grown into a world-wide organization whose products are sold in every country in the free world. We have 14 manufacturing facilities in the United States, plus subsidiaries or affiliates located in Canada, England, Mexico, Brazil, Italy, and Germany. Nevertheless, about half of our 3000 employees still work in the Latrobe area — where it all began.

Our wide range of activities provides an interesting challenge for a variety of skills. If you're interested in any phase of our business we'd like to hear from you. Kennametal Inc., Latrobe, Pa. 15650. Phone 412-537-3311.

If a healthy system of primary and secondary schools is as necessary to the continued strength of our country as most Americans believe it is, we will be required to use all the support—both private and public—that we can muster.

In a world growing more complex, the value of an educational system to a democratic society grows ever greater.

Thus, in allocating our national resources, few problems should rate higher than that of providing top-quality education.

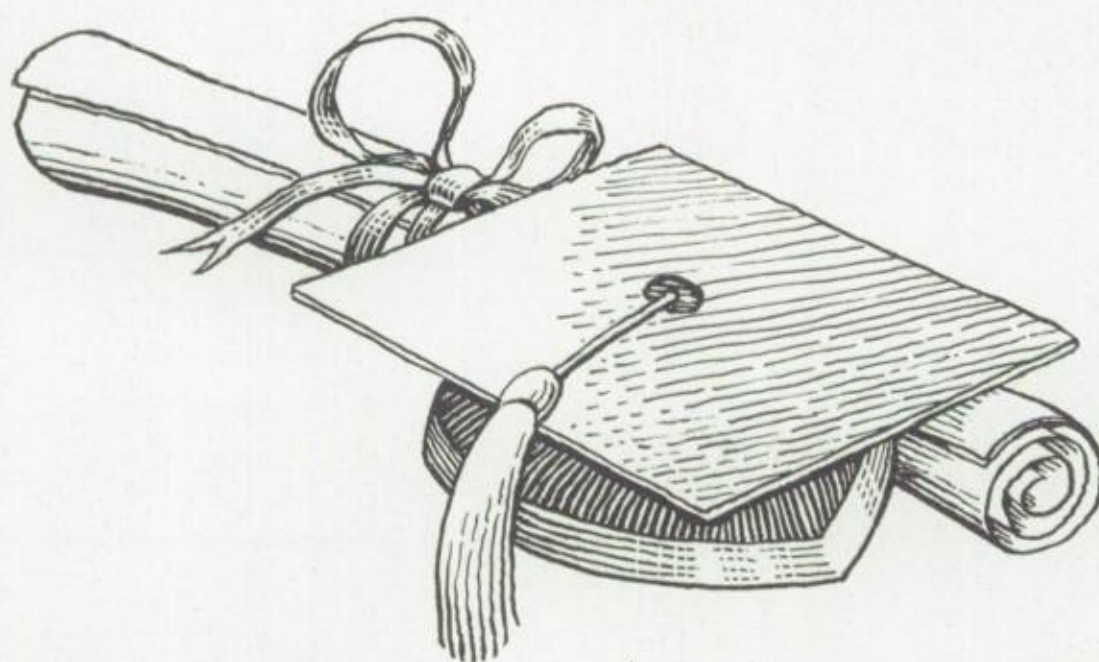

It seems absolutely essential that a greater vigilance be exercised over the costs of education and over its basic purpose.

As we work at the never-ending task of improving our educational system, maybe we should try to make it a source of distinguished leadership and a seed bed of culture and inspiration for a world that stands in need of both.

The job of meeting the increasing demands for qualified people at every level of our society is the most important single task facing the nation—and the success of all our other undertakings will depend on how well we do the job.

FRUGALITY — a word to remember.

A fundamental principle of self-government that our founding fathers practiced in their daily lives, and since held foremost by those who cherish our American heritage, is FRUGALITY. Webster's dictionary explains frugality as being "economical in the use of resources" — saving, provident, and obtained by or appropriate to ECONOMY.

Being frugal isn't miserly or stingy, but instead exercising wise judgment in the use of expenditure of wealth and resources. Our early settlers, appreciating the blessings of their new-found homeland, carved a nation with a constitutional government of checks and balances that, if respected and protected, would endure the ages. Today, vast extravagance, payroll padding, influence peddling, and similar political malpractices gnaw away at the very foundation of our freedom.

Young Americans can help keep our nation strong and free by constant vigilance and insistence on frugality in the handling of public funds.

Universally applicable, it's a principle worth remembering.
